HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

After some discussion progress was reported on Fredericton assessment bill. Mr. Gough moved resolution that in the opinion of the House Auditor General's salary do not exceed $1,200. He thought it time the House stepped in to stop the rash increase of the salary of officials. A reduction of $300 was advisable considering the depleted state of the revenue and our posi-ernment acted upon the recommendation of the Report of the Committees on public accounts for 1871 and 1872, and have not increased expenses of audit office. He read the Report of Committee on public accounts for 1871 and 1872, and have not increased expenses of audit office. He read the report of Committee on public acc unts for 1871, when they respectfully invited attention to the consideration of the salary of the Auditor General. He also read the report of 1872, where it is stated he was well entitled to some addition to the present moderate stipend, The Government thought these recommendations were sincere, and that they were justified in acting upon such recommendation, and knew the House would sustain them in carrying them out. He referred to his ability as singular that the next hardest thing to that over $100,000 had been expended last to the Better Terms delegates He referred to this a reason why they should not reduce his

Mr. Gough said he did not move his resolution to embarrass the Government, nor to defeat any aim they may have in view, nor to it out of consideration to the province. He showed that the Auditor took office at $500; it was now increased to $1,500, and he wishearnestness in economizing when asking for Better Terms.
