Poetry.

The venerable Past is past; 'Tis dark, and shines not in the way; 'Twas good, no doubt-'tis gone at last-There dawns another day. Why should we sit where ivies creep And shroud ourselves in charnels deep, Or the world's yesterdays deplore 'Mid crumbling ruins' mossy hoar? Why should we see with dead men's eyes

Looking at Was, from morn till night, When the beauteous Now, the divine To Be, Woo with their charms our living sight? Why should we hear but echoes dull When the world of sound so beautiful Will give us music of our own? Why in the darkness should we grope, When the sun, in heaven's resplendent cope, Shines as bright as it ever shone. The Present needs us. Every age

But lazy luxury or delight, But strenuous labour for the right: For Now, the child and sire of Time, Demands the deeds of earnest men To make it better than the past And stretch the circle of its ken Now is a fact that men deplore, Though it might bless them evermore Would they but fashion it aright 'Tis ever new, 'tis ever bright. Time nor Eternity hath seen A repetition of delight In all its phases; ne'er has been For men or angels that which is: And that which is hath ceased to be Ere we have breathed it, and its place Is lost in the eternity. But now is ever good and fair, Of the Infinitude and heir, And we of it. So let us live

That from the past we may receive

Light for the Now-from now a joy

That Fate nor Time shall e'er destroy.

Bequeaths the next for heritage

A Chinese emperor cannot select an empress from the imperial family. He must take a wife from the people, and she must belong to one of the " eight banners." When a bride was to be selected for the present emperor orders were issued to the chiefs who had daughters of the desired age to send them to the palace. Strange to say, families do not desire their daughters to become the wife of an emperor. She is not only lost, as it were, to her friends, but by her marriage her parents and family are brought into a prominent position, which is often dangerous in a country like China. However, on the appointed day six or seven hundred girls appeared .-They were minutely inspected, and about sixty selected as the result of the examination. A second and third inspection reduced the number to twenty; and finally, by a series of examinations the empress was chosen. The young emperor seems to have felt some interest in this competitive examination, for while it was going on he had a dream. It was that he had fallen in love with a young lady, and that she was hump-backed. As lame and deformed were ordered to the palace—many A petition is being got up by the ladies of being reported so by their parents to prevent Glasgow, asking Mr. Gladstone to revive the their being summoned—a hump-backed girl was really among the number, and the eman act that any maiden lady, of high or low peror took the dream as an omen that this was one of the first fifty or sixty selected, and medical men were consulted as to the possiwas heavily fined, according to the value of vain efforts, it is said that a farrier, a very his worldly possessions.
