If your life ain't nothin' to other folks. And that's what I say to wife, says I, There's Brown, the mis'rable sinner, He'd sooner a beggar would starve than give know who was there.

Tell you our minister's prime, he is But I couldn't quite determine, When I heard him a-givin' it right and left Just who was hit by his sermon; Of course there couldn't be no mistake When he talked of long-winded prayin', For Peters and Johnson they sat and scowled At every word he was sayin',

And the minister he went on to say, "There's various kinds o' cheatin', And religion's as good for every day As it is to bring to meetin'. don't think much of a man that gives The Lord Amens at my preachin' And spends his time the following week In cheatin' and over-reachin'.'

John Jankins' Sermon.

The minister said last night, says he,

Why, what's the use o' livin'?"

A cent toward buyin' a dinner.

"Don't be afraid of giving;

guess that dose was bitter enough For a man like Jones to swaller; But I noticed he didn't open his mouth, Not once, after that, to holler. Hurrah, says I, for the minister-Of course I said it quiet-Give us some more of his open talk; It's very refreshing diet.

The minister hit 'em every time; And when he spoke of tashion. And a-riggin' out in bows and things, As woman's rulin' passion, And a-commin' to church to see the styles. I couldn't help a-winkin' And a-nudgin' my wife, and says I, "That's you,"
And I guess it set her thinkin'

Says I to myself "That sermon's pat, But man's a queer creation: And I'm much afraid that most o' the folk Won't take the application.' Now if he had said a word about My personal mode o' sinnin', I'd gone to work to right myself,

And not sat here a-grinnin'.

Just then the minister, says he, "And now I've come to the fellers Who've lost this shower by usin' their friends, country, and no mistake. As sort o' mortal umbrellas. Go home, 'said he, "and find your faults Instead of huntin' your brothers'; Go home," he says, "and wear the coats You've tried to fit for others."

My wife she nudged, and Brown he winked And there was lots o' smilin'. And lots o' lookin' at our pew; It set my blood a-b'ilin's Says I to myself, "Our minister

THE REBELLION IN KHOKAND.—A letter from a correspondent of the New York Herald in Central Asia gives details of the rebellion now in progress in Khokand. The present monarch, Khudoyan Khan, is the same jealous tyrant that he has always been. The gallows stands in every town, and the bazaar of Khokand often runs with blood. He has spared nothing to fortify himself upon his throne, and the people of Khokand are so impressed and trodden down by the Khan that he had a spared not have been sent as the sent and the people of Khokand are so impressed and trodden down by the Khan that he has not a well-wisher in the country, while his neighbors look upon him with even less favor. An attempt to dethrone him resulted in the usurper's being impaled alive, an atrociously cruel punishment under which the victim often lingers for several days .-Khudoyan Khan then had the throats of over six hundred of the usurper's supporters cut on the bazaar. The rebellion was, it was thought, at an end, but the latest news is that it has broken out again, and that the insurgents have arisen in all their might against he tyrant.
