TIRED MOTHERS.

A little elbow leans upon your knee, Your tired knee, that has so much to bear; A child's dear eyes are looking lovingly From underneath a thatch of tangled hair. Perhaps you do not feel the velvet touch Of warm, moist fingers, folding yours so You do not prize this blessing over much, You almost are too tired to-night.

But it is blessedness! A year ago I did not see it as I do to-day— We are so dull and thankless, and too slow To catch the sunshine till it slips away. And now it seems surpassing strange to me, That while I wore the badge of motherhood I did not kiss more oft, and tenderly, The child that brought me only good.

And if, some night when you lie down to rest, You miss the elbow from your tired knee; This restless, curling head from off your breast, If from your own the dimpled hands had slipped If the white feet into their grave had tripped, I could not blame your heart ache then! I wonder so that mothers never fret

Are ever black enough to make them If I could find a little muddy boot, Or cap thrown down upon my chamber floor; If I could kiss a rosy, restless foot, And hear it patter in my home once more; If I could mend a broken cart to-day.

There is no woman in God's world can say She was more blissfully content than I. But, ah! dainty pillow next my own
Is never rumpled by a shining head;
My singing birdling from its nest has flown— The little boy I used to kiss is dead!
