The Old, Old Home.

When I long for sainted memories,

Like angel troops they come, If I fold my arms and ponder On the old, old home. The heart has many passages Through which the feelings roam,

But its middle aisle is sacred To the old, old home. Where infancy was sheltered Like rose-buds from the blast. Where girlhood's brief elysium In joyeusness was passed;

To that sweet sp t for ver, As to some hallowed dome. Life's pilgrim bends her vision-'Tis her old, old home. A father sat, how proudly,

And told his children stories Of his early manhood's days: And one soft eve was beaming. From child to child 'twould roam; Thus a mother counts her treasures. In the old, old home.

By that hearthstone's rays,

The birthday gifts and festivals, The blended vesper hymn (Some dear one who was swelling it Is with the Scraphim) The fond "good nights" at bed time. How quiet sleep would come. And fold us all together

Like a wreath of scented flowers Close intertwine each heart: But time and change in concert Have blown the wreath apart. But dear and sainted memories Like angels ever come. If I fold my arms and ponder

In the old, old home.

A MARINE MONSTER .- The London Daily Telegraph gives an interesting description of the new English war-ship Devastation: "That the Devastation is a great success, so far as she has been tried, is now admitted. The ponderous monster, which squats upon the astonished waters with a dead weight of 10,000 tons, takes any ordinary waves with stolid indifference, whether she receives them end-on, or upon bow, beam, or quarter. The prodigious hill of foam which her stern piles up when underway, washes, as was expected, clean over her forward deck, and she is often submerged aft; but her massive midsection, rides quietly enough, and those on board her when anchored in the rolling tideway, say that she was 'steadier than the house ashore.' She turns with great readiness and in a small circle, and her speed, as proved in six trials along the measured mile, s not only equal to the promise of her designers, but it exceeds expectation.
