Poetry.
The Maiden's Last Farewell,
IN THE DAY OF CREMATION.
Then the night wore on, and we knew the worst,
That the end of it all was nigh:
Three doctors they had from the very first—
And what could one do but die?

"Oh, William," she cried, "strew no blooming flowers on my grave!
For the new 'apparatus' might rust;
But say that a handful of shavings you'll bring,
And I'll be your combsust."
"Oh, promise me, love, by the fire-hole you'll
watch,
And when mourners and stokers convene,
You will see that they light me some solemn,
And warm them against keroseene."

"It would cheer me to know, ere these rude
brezes melt to the pulp,
That one whom I love will look to the draft,
