BABY-LAND.
BY GEORGE COOPER.
How many miles to Baby-Land?
Any one can tell;
Up one flight,
To your right;
Please to ring the bell.
What can you see in Baby-Land?
Little folks in white,
Downy heads,
Cradle beds,
Faces pure and bright.
What do they do in Baby-Land?
Dream and wake and play, Laugh and grow,
Shout and grow;
Jolly times have they.
What do they eat in Baby-Land?
Why, the oddest things, Might as well
Try to tell
What a birdie sings.
Who is Queen of Baby-Land?
Mother, kind and sweet;
And her love,
Born above,
Guides the little feet!

Select Tale.
The Faded Wrapper.
"Are you not sorry that father has gone away to stay over night, Alice?"
"It is no matter," said Alice, "but I wish you would not say so, for I do not want to worry you. I heard her tell Barbara she would have a good long day for sewing. She doesn't think it worth while to sit even the dining-room table just for us."
"Don't you wish she would spill ink on that dress, Philip?" was the answer.
"Then she wouldn't wear it any more."
"No indeed, I don't want it any worse, for she would wear it just the same rainy days and when papa is away."

Now mamma in the next room, heard this discussion of the children, and arose to take a survey of herself in the looking-glass.
She was not a very pleasing picture that the polished surface gave back to her view.
"Now Harry Warren's mother," said Philip, "is always dressed nicely, any time of day."
"She wears such pretty bows on her hair and neck," said Alice. "But she isn't half so pleasant as our mother," she added loyally, "if she does look prettier." The mother's eyes glistened as she looked down on the old wrapper.
"To be compared to Aunt Warren," she thought, "and by my own children, too. Who would have thought they were such sharp little things? They notice every trifle." Mrs. Montgomery's spirit was quite stirred.
She would not allow such a rival, she said to herself, if she could eliphe her.
"You shall be disappointed about the old wrapper, for once, Mr. Philip," she added smiling, so she took a soft bright dress, just the thing to enliven a dull day. Then she puffed her hair in her prettiest style, and proceeded to dress herself with unusual care.
The delicate lace collar was adorned with a bow of palest pink, and her hair was tied back with a ribbon to match.

It is wonderful how these simple additions to the toilet changed the whole appearance.
A little taste does much for a woman's toilet, and how small often is the cost. A simple kind of violet or crimson or velvet will make a dull dress look bright and even elegant.
As a great painter said, "trifles make perfection, but perfection is no trifle." Mrs. Montgomery's face wore a brighter look than usual that day, as she entered the nursery. Her dress had actually raised her spirits, but she was hardly prepared for the burst of admiration that greeted her. It was not often that compliments are so sincere and heart-felt as were those of her little ones that day. But her children's tones quickly changed to one of anxiety.
"Are you going away anywhere, mamma?" they asked directly.
"No dears, I am going to sew on the machine all day; so we can have a nice time together."
Little Alice hung over her chair a minute, admiringly, and fingered her buttons, as she said, with a smile of deep content in her eye.
"You look nice, mamma." Mrs. Montgomery smiled, as she threaded the needle of her machine; while Philip added proudly:
"She looks nicer than Harry's mother, even when she has her silk dress on."
That was reward enough, and she had collied her rival.
"I'll remember this day's lesson," said the mother in her own heart; and she did remember it.

The rainy day dress was doomed, and they helped to rip it up with sincere pleasure. It made excellent lining for a new one, and it often preached its old sermon over, as it hung, wrong side out in the closet.
Mothers when you allow yourselves slovenliness among the little ones, in the seclusion of the nursery, remember there is a child there "a takin' notes." Those notes will be read when your head lies low. Of all the bright pictures that hang on memory's wall, there is none so true as a sweet loving mother, whose appearance was always neat and tasteful, even in working dress.
Children may love an untidy mother, after a fashion, but they never respect her. The older and those in the way may look out, but cannot keep the hold on them in after years.
Let each of the opposite habits possessors.
Besides, if you are untidy yourself, they will probably grow up to imitate you. Don't neglect the details of dress, that add so much to appearance, because there will be "no one about but the children."

At Evansville, recently, a man fell into a ditch on the outskirts of the town. A pedestrian helped him to his feet, and after the thing had been accomplished our hero said:
"All right—hic—I'll vote for you." The stranger looked at him doubtfully, and wished to know what for. "What office you running for?" "I? None at all," was the answer. "Not a candidate?" "No, why?"
"Why—hic—why?" "Cause I don't know as any man'd—hic—help me after as you did 'bout being a candidate—hic—"

A true religious instinct never deprived man of one single joy; mournful faces and a sombre aspect are the conventional affections of the weak-minded.

God's Nobility.
That pale-faced girl—consumptive, they call her—who had everything to live for, but who, recalling a dreary sickness, said: "I would have nothing otherwise, for so it has pleased my Father," was one of God's queens; and they are everywhere, and often where we little expect to find them.
The poor woman who stitches her life into her work at midnight may be finishing a robe for herself so royal that no other fingers are fit to touch it, lest it be soiled. Surely our employments do not change our moral relations, and through their tasks and daily work, whatever its character, and through all sorts of losses and temporary defeats, these regal sons of God will yet carve their way to the throne and empire. And often, very often, does this primary character of Man crop out, almost in spite of itself, even in the humblest avocations.
See that grimy but smiling engineer, whose quick eye has discovered a child, unconscious of danger, approaching the track; the speed of the locomotive is at its utmost; the distances are well measured; there is but one possibility. The noble man reverses his locomotive, then quickly glides along its side to a position of great danger, reaches out a strong arm, and catches the child when there are but twelve inches between it and death; and when the train comes to a stand-still, he kisses the cheek of the child, thinking the royal toy too sweet and pure for his rough tough, (they are not), sets it in its feet again, face homeward, and whistles "off brakes."

Three persons, a mother and her child, a rough sailor heavily clad in pilot suit, was seen clinging to a floating scud after shipwreck. It would support two until the life boat came to the rescue, but not three. The sailor looked, struggled with the conflicting thoughts of life and death for a moment, then pushed off, threw up his hands, and sank in to the dark sea; the woman and child were saved.
Is there not the presence of God in such sacrifices, tenderness and nobility. The Infinite One and such conduct are one and inseparable, and must stand or fall together.
Such men are God's princes, living under a more direct rule than we mortals. There are more of Christ in the common walks of life than we give credit for; indeed, there is where Christ is most apt to make his stay. Could you look through the soot on many a man's face, you would behold a king.
Providence too, is, or appears to be, singular in its assignments, if men are God's sons.
She often puts them to employments that seem at least, ill fitting to princes. They are rarely found in regal palaces, but are often seen tilling the soil, with brow not curled with diamonds, but beaded with sweat and dust. They are seen playing the needle, with weak fingers and broken hearts; are found toiling down in coal pits, and with grimy faces and bearded hands, are for years assigned the task of firing and driving the locomotive along dusty railways, in actual peril, and near possible death every day and every hour.

Is not all this evidence of humiliation, rather than exaltation? True; so it seems, at least; but remember the chief Prince himself touched the earth to rise again. Kings may be born in stables without prejudicing in the least their titles. In that act of tilling the soil may be involved the preliminaries of future inauguration, if the work is faithfully done, the coal pit worker may be unconsciously furnishing supplies to light the Lord's house, upon the occasion of receiving the throne and sceptre. No matter about the kind of work; how the work is done decides the merit.
We are walking daily in the midst of a royal family, and should have a smile of good cheer, and a bow of respect for the woman who sweeps our house, or the man who heaves our coal, or paves our street, for they may be kings and queens incoy, and under mask; they may be not one strip farther removed from the throne than are the most honored of us.

Carrying a Ladder.
Did you ever see a person carrying a ladder? He puts it on his shoulder, or he may be put the ladder between the rounds and has one of the sides resting on each shoulder, and having it nicely balanced, walks along. A man with a ladder is an interesting object in a crowded street. He looks at the end before him, but the end behind him he cannot see.
If he moves from the front to the right end to get out of the way of a person, away goes the rear end just as far in the opposite direction, and the slightest turn of his body, only a few inches, will give the end a sweep of several feet, and those in the way may look out for brained hats and bumped heads, while the window glass along the street is in constant danger from the unseen rear end of the ladder. When a small boy, I was carrying a very large ladder, when there was a crash.
An unlucky movement had brought the rear end of my ladder against a window. Instead of soothing me, my father made me stop, and said, very quietly: "Look here, my son, there is one thing that I wish you to remember; that is, every ladder has two ends." I never have forgotten that, though many years have gone, and I never see a man carrying a ladder or other long thing, but then I remember the two ends. Don't we carry things besides ladders that have two ends? When I see a young man getting fast in his habits, I think he sees only one end of that ladder, the one pointed towards pleasure, and that he does not know that the other is wounding his parents hearts. Many a young girl carries a ladder in the shape of love for dress and finery; she only sees the gratification of a foolish pride at the forward end of that ladder, while the end she does not see is crushing true modesty. True friendship as shoes along thoughtlessly among the crowd.
Ah, yes, every ladder has two ends, and it is a thing to be remembered in more ways than one.

We never knew a soldiering person that was able to govern a family. What makes people so? Because they cannot govern themselves. How can they govern others? Those who govern well are generally calm. They are prompt and resolute, but steady and mild.

If a man does not make new acquaintances as he advances through life, he will soon find himself alone. A man should keep his friendship in constant repair.

Of all pleasures there are the most valuable which lie in the mind.

Get justly, distribute cheerfully, and live contentedly.

Fretful People.
It is not work that kills men—it is worry.
Work is healthy. You can hardly put more work on a man than he can bear. Worry is rust upon the blade. It is not the revolution that destroys the machinery, but the friction.
Fear secretes acid; but love and truth are sweet juices.
We know a man with a patient, good Christian wife, and we never heard him speak a kind, pleasant word to her, and doubt if he ever did in the half century they have lived together. He is always a fret. You would think he was made of a cross-grained timber, and had always been trying to digest the cross-cut saw. He is continually cross, and thinks that his wife and children, hired hands, and all the domestic animals, have entered into a combination to worry him to death.
He is not only rusty, but fairly crusted over with it. Friction has literally worn him out, and he will soon literally wear it to death. Of course he has never worked to any advantage for himself or anybody else. With him everything goes wrong. He superstitiously believes it is because the devil has a spite against him, when in truth it is nothing but his own fretfulness.—Christian Advocate.

There are many reasons why we should endeavor to overcome the natural tendency to use in many of our actions the right side of the body to the exclusion of the left, but we are now favored, for the first time, with the principal reason, and that of a most startling character. Dr. Brown-Sequard has been delivering a series of admirable courses of lectures to a Boston audience, on "Nerve Force and Nerve Derangements," and among other important matters, he has propounded a theory of the Double Brain. He says: "One-half of the brain is sufficient for all the functions of the two halves of the organ. There is no question that it is our habit of making use of only one side of the body, that consigns to one-half of the brain—the right side—the faculty of expressing ideas by speech. If we develop both sides of our body equally, not only would there be the benefit that we could write or work with the left hand as well as with the right, but we should have two brains instead of one, and would not be deprived of the power of speech through disease of one side of the brain." This is certainly a wonderful discovery, if it be true, and we should look for a large and broad manifi-estation of mental power from our friends who are fortunate enough to be ambidextrous. The connection between the use of any member on the right side of the body and the faculty of expressing our ideas by speech does not strike us as being clearly proved; but we are continually meeting with wonders, and we may expect hereafter, to see the work of literature, science, and art articulated as being the productions of the right-handed or left-handed brain.

The Sweetness of Home.
He who has no home has not the sweetest pleasures of life; he feels not the thousand endeavors that cluster around that hall-ed spot to fill the void of his aching heart, and while away his leisure moments in the Representative of the President of the Republic; second, confirms Marshal MacMahon's Presidency until 1880; third, provides for a partial or total revision of the constitutional bill now before the Senate.
The Italian Government is busily engaged in unearthing the foundations of old Rome.
The Forum Romanum has been cleared out down to the pavement, the Via Sacra and the Coliseum partially so, and the sum of $10,000 has been appropriated for continuing the excavations.
Interviews with New York merchants represent that the trade of the city in several important branches is seriously retrograding.
In the dry goods, one house that formerly sold fifty millions per annum now sells twenty millions. Ten of the largest houses in that city lost over $250,000 in the aggregate by the falling off of trade.
The Constitutional bill before the French Assembly provides first that the Government will consist of a Senate and Chamber of Representatives; second, confirms Marshal MacMahon's Presidency until 1880; third, provides
for a partial or total revision of the constitutional bill now before the Senate.
There is nothing new under the sun, or even slang. A popular and expressive phrase of the present day will be found in Shakes-
