Poetry.
IF WE KNEW.
[22-41] If we knew the wee and heart ache Waiting for us down the road, If our lips could taste the wormwood, If our backs could feel the lead, Would we waste to-day in wishing For a time that we're can't live?
Would we wait in such impatience Vex us thus to come from seas?
[22-41] If we knew the baby fingers, Pressing against the window pane, Would be cold and stiff to-morrow—Never trouble us again:
Would the bright eyes of our darling Catch the frown upon our brow?
Would the print of rosy fingers
Vex us thus to come from seas?
[22-41] Ah, those little ice-odd fingers, How they point our memory back To the happy days of childhood, And sweet words that freight our memory With the print of rosy fingers Vex us thus to come from seas?
[22-41] Strange we never prize the music, Till the sweet voice birds have flown; Strange that we should slight the violets In the blessings of day; Strange that summer skies and sunshine Never seem so half so fair As when winter's snowy pinions Shake their white down in the air!

[From the New York Witness.]
THE STREET OF HELL.
[22-41] In 1870 there were in the United States one hundred and forty thousand licensed liquor saloons. If formed into a street with saloons on each side, allowing twenty feet to each saloon, the street would be a street two hundred and sixty-five miles long. Let us imagine them brought together into such a street, and let us suppose that the moderate drinkers and their families are marching into it at the upper end. Go with me if you have the nerve and patience, and stand at the lower end, and let us see what that street turns out in one year.
What army is this that comes marching down the street in solid column, five abreast, extending five hundred and seventy miles?
It is the army of five million men and women who daily and constantly go to the saloons for intoxicating drinks as a beverage.
Marching twenty miles a day, it will take them more than twenty-eight days to go by.
Now they are gone, and close in their rear comes another army marching five abreast, and sixty miles in length. They are men and women who have lost control of their appetites, who are in the regular habit of getting drunk, and making fools of themselves.
Marching two abreast, the army is one hundred and fifty miles long. Scan them closely.
They are gray-haired men and fair-haired boys. There are, alas! many women in the army stout to deeper depths than the men, because of the greater heights from which they fell. It will take them seven days to go by.
It is a sad and sickening sight, but do not turn away yet, for here comes another army —one hundred thousand criminals. From jails, and prisons, and penitentiaries they come. At the head of the army comes a long line of persons whose hands are smeared with blood. With ropes around their necks they are on the way to the gallows. Others are going to prison for life. Every crime known to our laws have been committed by these persons while they were under the influence of drink.
But hark! whence comes those yells, and who are those bound with strong chains and guarded by strong men, that go raging by?
They are raving maniacs, made such by strong drinks. Their eyes are tormented with awful sights, and their ears ring with horrid sounds.
Slimy reptiles crawl over their bodies and bite them; but they heed not these things.
They are gone now, and we breathe more freely.
But what gloom is this that pervades the air, and what is that light line of black coming slowly down the street? It is the line of funeral processions. One hundred thousand who have died the drunkard's death, are being carried to their graves. Drunkards do not have many friends to mourn their loss, and we can put thirty of their funeral processions into a mile. We thus have a procession 3,333 miles long. It will take a good share of the year for them to go by, for in the processions more slowly. Yes, most of them do, but every now and then an unconfessed corpse in a rough cart is driven rapidly by, and we hear the brutal driver say, "Quick, rattie his bones, rattie his bones."
Over the stones;
He's only a pauper whom nobody owns." Look into the coffin as they go by. See the dead drunkards. Some died of delirium tremens, and the lines of terror are still plainly marked on their faces. Some froze to death by the roadside, too drunk to reach their homes. Some stumbled from the wharf and were drowned. Some wandered into the woods and died, and rotted on the surface of the earth. Some blew their own brains out.
Some were fearfully stabbed in drunken brawls. Some were crushed to shreds in under the cars. They died in various ways, but strong drink killed them all, and on their tombstones, if they have any, may be fitly inscribed, "He died a drunkard's death."

Our Queen and Constitution.
[22-41] —innocent ones, upon whom have been visited the iniquities of their fathers. How many are there? Two hundred thousand.
Marching two abreast, they extend up the street thirty miles. Each one must bear through life the stigma of being a drunkard's child. They are reduced to poverty, want and beggary. They live in ignorance and vice.
Some of the children are moaning with hunger, and some all shivering with the cold, for they have not enough rags to keep them warm. A large number of them are idiots, made such before they were born, by brutal, drunken fathers. And worse than all the rest, many of them have inherited a love for liquor, and are growing up to take the places, and do the deeds of their fathers. They will fill up the ranks of the awful army of drunkards, that moves in unbroken columns down to death.
It has taken nearly a year for the street to empty itself of this year's work. And close in the rear comes the vanguard of the next year's supply. And if this is what liquor does in our land in one year, what must be its results in all the world through the long centuries!

of May 10. This is the fourth planetary discovery of the present century.
"Cry-Baby Polka" is the latest. Nurse says she doesn't think they ought to do that to the little dear, "paragon" is so much soothing.
Cornelius Vanderbilt, it is said, offered to bet $500 the other day that he would be as able and active as he is now for the next five years.
The sponge fisheries on the Syrian coast employ about 200 boats and 1200 men, and yield products to the amount of $100,000 annually.
M. L. Sullivan, the great Ford County farmer in Illinois, has this year a single field of 20,000 acres, which will produce over 1,000, 000 bushels of corn.
London has a large theatre completely underground, and yet perfectly ventilated.
It has proved a pecuniary gain for the manager.
An Iowa paper predicts that in five years every barrel of western flour will be sent east in barrels of paper, made from the straw the wheat grew on.
The Dominion Government has appointed Frederick Davis and Rev. J. W. Manning commissioners to enquire into the working of Prohibition in the United States.
An impressive warning against attempting to unseat a legislator by force, is given by an Indiana paper in the case of a citizen who was drowned in the canal while trying to wash himself.
A recent writer says a man with his first book has an exaggerated sense of its importance and of his own. "He is like a man with a ball on the end of his nose. The affair fills a large space in his consciousness." Kentucky with its somewhat peculiar if a little lonely. A farmer being asked the other day if a daughter recently married was still living with him, replied: "No sir.
When one of my gals swears she must hunt her own live."
A man who can give up dreaming and go to his daily realities; who can smother down his heart, his love or woe, and take to the road work of his hands, who can see fate, and if he must die, die fighting to the last, that man is life's best hero.
A Brooklyn young woman, who abandoned her old husband, says: "He was too soft.
I could not be hugged and kissed all the while it isn't my disposition. I couldn't bear to be obliged to sit on his lap and cuddle him every time I wanted a cat." A beautiful illustration of woman's love has just been exhibited in Liverpool. A woman, to shield her husband from a heavy charge with removing the end of her nose, swore that she bit it off herself.
Remember that appearance is often deceiving. Many a patient young lady who eat more corned beef than a carpenter. Because you find her playing the piano in the parlor it is no sign that her mother is not at the corner grocery running in debt for a peck of potatoes.
A lady who allows her serving maids to receive the visits of male cousins, one evening recently overheard Patrick say to Biddy, "You don't care for me, do you, in the garners now, yare!" The "his" referred to the lord of the household, and not Biddy receives callers at some other establishment.
Kind words are the bright flowers of charity's existence; use them, and especially around the fireside circle. They are jewels beyond price, and powerful to heal the wounds of evil, and make the weighed down spirit glad.
It is not high crimes, such as robbery and murder, which destroy the peace of society.
The village gossip, family quarrels, jealous-ies, and bickering between neighbors, are disseminations of evil, and are the worms which eat into all social happiness.
An Irish poet by having driven a gentleman a long stage during torments of rain, the gentleman grew so angry that he fell off the stage, and the poet, who was not very well, was not very wet, but, please your honor, I'm very dry.
The Seneca tribe of Indians now consists of one old horse, a chief, and three gallons of whiskey. A few more setting suns—a few more moons—a brief season, and that three-gallon will join its comrades in the happy hunting ground.
The West is noted for its admiration of the fair sex. An Iowa Justice of the Peace recently refused to sign a man arraigned before him for kissing a girl, saying he was "Because," as he remarked, "the plaintiff is so temptingly pretty that nothing but an overwhelming sense of duty, and the responsibilities of his oath, has prevented the Court from
