FOR THE CARLETON SENTINEL. MR. EDITOR,—There has been a great deal said and written about this present school law—some lauding it in unmeasured terms, to convince the most sceptical that Mr. Vince others seeing nothing better than, nor near possesses every quality requisite to constitute opens the door of the school to the poor man's old system in contra distinction of the new. child, giving the blessings of an education to all. Those opposed to the law decry it to the best of their ability, and leave nothing undone to expose its imperfections and throw doubt on its utility. Amongst this last party I must class myself; for I cannot see benefits enough in the law to counterbalance the evils any better education. And they also say it is got up to rob the country by giving large salaries to a host of officials—all rich men, of course,—therefore they consider it a benefit to the rich and oppressive on the poor. A course,—therefore they consider it abenefit to the rich and oppressive on the poor. A course,—therefore they consider it abenefit to the rich and oppressive on the poor. A course,—therefore they consider it a benefit to the rank professors $3,000. The control of the variation of the variation to the different Parishes, convened for that purpose in their separate localities, savors too much of ring domination and is not conduct to the rich and oppressive on the poor. A control of the variation of the variatio poor man in the country, under the old law, do not think there is any need of all this cive to the free choice of the Electors, and could secure entrance to any school for his alarm. I think not. But while we feel the value of independence. But under want men sound on the achool law, we want poverty—called little beggar—and made to feel its lowly state by every way one child knows how to torment another, and any one who has been to school knows the ways are many. The poor man has no chance to be men of good morals, sober men, &c., for be men of good morals, sober men, & independent, nor the child to feel so under and Mr. Irvine has proved a failure and having day the Czar, autocrat of all the Russias,
