THE subscriber would respectfully announce the public that he has Lived a maid in a hunter's lodge, as fair As a flower o' the forest rude, And as free as the free, untroubled air JUST RECEIVED AND OPENED, Of its infinite solitude.

But a spirit, whose haunt was the river-shore, ONE CASE Oft caressing her slender feet, Stole a glance at the gentle face bent o'er The unrest of his winding sheet; New Dress Goods And so limpid the depth of those dark eyes Whence her innocent soul outshone

That the god of the stream desired, with That the marden might be his own.

Then he twined o'er his brow the dripping

And the mariner lily fair, And in desperate mood for love's mad need Up arose from his watery lair.
Like a startled gazelle the maid leaped back
'Neath the fluttering forest's wing; With the flight of a fawn, when fierce hounds

She escaped from the flood's bold king.

But the sons of the gods are fleeter far Than the daughters of mortal kind; With the rush of meteoric star He pursues, and she flies like wind. Now a bend of the stream her eyes deplore-In her path is the watery death; Close behind is the god. O fatal shore! On her face is a chill, damp breath.

With a panting of prayer, "Great Manitou, Hasten now to deliver!" she pleads; Then, with sudden-born impulse, swift she

To a bower of river reeds; And there tremulous stems about her bound, Early Large York, As if swift in a whirlwind storm; and behold! in their light embraces wound, She is changed to another form.

She is rooted in earth, her rare round arms Into tapering leaves are grown, And a proud plumed stalk, her heart yet BLUE STORE, Like a princes the reeds enthrone.

Fine and silken, her hair sheaves round the pearls
Flashed out from her smile of scorn, low the kernels of snow, the milk set whorls, Gents' Fine Sewed Boots, Of a beautiful ear of corn.

Thus arrested, the god his chaplet flings On the waves of his subject stream— How, the mockery broken, its current sings
Of his broken, delusive dream! Best Workman in Carleton Co. Then the passionate spirit, foiled, betrayed,
Is dissolved into dew-fine sprays, To adorn with a crown of tears the maid Metamorphosed to graceful maize.

> And as long as the rivers scorn the chain Of a future of Yengeese kings, And as long as the pale moons wax and wane O'er the wild of the "shadowing wings," When the moccasined foot of the red man where his bannered fields unfurl,

Will be liken the rustling leaves of maize
To the flight of the timid girl.

Some One to Love.—Perhaps one of the most positive proofs we have of the soul's independence of the body, is our great need of love. Where we mere animals—creatures doomed to perish after a few years of life in this world—that which contents the brute would alone content us. To eat and sleep well, to have an easy time of it, would be enough. As it is, we may have all these things, and health to enjoy them, and yet be utterly wretched. Neither can mental food satisfy us. Some one to love,' is our life wishing to love all people, and believing that they love us. Experience hardens us. Our dear ones grow fewer; but as long as reason lasts we must love some one—we must at least imagine that some one loves us. The parents, sisters

The most dangerous affections of the Pulmonary Organs vield to its power; and cases of Consumption, cured by this preparation, are publicly known, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a remedy, it is adequate, on which the public may rely for full protection. By curing Coughs, the forerunners of more serious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and con-vinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attack of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first, but which become incurable, and too often fatal, if negbecome incurable, and too often fatal, if neglected. Tender lungs need this defence; and it is unwise to be without it. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of childhood, CHERRY PECTORAL is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centred on them. It acts speedily and surely against ordinary colds, securing sound and health-restoring sleep. No one will suffer troublesome Influenza and painful Bronchitis, when they know how easily they can be cured.
