The Footsteps of Decay.

Oh, let the soul its slumbers break-

Arouse its senses, and awake

To see how soon

Life, in its glories, glides away,

Come stealing on.

Away so fast,

Already past.

That into the engulfing sea

Are doomed to fall-

Alike the humble rivulets glide, To that sad wave

Death levels poverty and pride,

Within the grave.

Our birth is but a starting place;

And death the goal;

See, then, how poor and little worth Are all those glittering toys of earth

Dreams of a sleep that death must break;

Long ere the damp of death can blight, The cheek's pure glow of red and white

A LITTLE BIT OF ROMANCE. - Last summe a well known and wealthy manufacturer of New England visited the White Mountains. He became infatuated with one of the waiter girls. He was reventy and the maiden was seventeen. He agreed to give her an education and adopt her, though he had several daughters of his own. She joyfully accepted the proposition, flung her white apron behind the door and started on her new life. Of course the connection could not be very satisfactory to the family. The girl had a vein of shrewdness about her, and insisted that a formal paper of adoption should be drawn up.
This was done, and the girl was sent to a well known educational institution to receive a little polish. A correspondence was kept up between the parties. But to outsiders the matter was not satisfactory, and the Principal refused to receive the young lady into the school after the vacation was over. Soon after, the gentleman became crazy and was removed to a lunatic asylum; removed, as the girl said, to get him beyond her reach. The remittances failed, and of course there Twenty-four greyhounds of choice breed was trouble in the new schools into which the were recently sold in Eugland for upward of girl had entered.
