THE POPULATION OF CHINA.—Says the Shanghai Courier: The subject of the population of China is the riddle of the Sphinx, ever guessed at but never solved. And if it were solved no one would ever know it, because there can be no verification. In connection with our first knowledge of China we are taught that its population is immense. Its millions teem. The delusion of one or two generations ago that Jeddo and Pekin are the world's great centers of population is scarcely yet dispelled. Many of the cities of the eighteen provinces, especially in the south, are undoubtedly enormous, and to the casual traveller all Chinese cities are presumptively the same. He has learned in his geography or read in his encyclopedia that the population of Tientsin is 500,000, and that of Pekin from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000. These round numbers are generally accepted without question, and on this scale smaller cities are guaged. Thus we meet the most confident estimates of population, formed on scanty data, or on no data at all, by every latest traveller, who, like a supreme court, It is said there are 500,000 Freemasons in has the last guess at the case. The difference between the high scale and the low The annual consumption of crabs in France scale of estimating Chinese cities is a difference of nearly one-half. There are those who cling to the old tradition that the population of Pekin is 2,000,000, and there are others who consider 700,000 a liberal estimate. Little or no dependence is to be placed on the estimates of transient travel-Cactus leaf is to be used in the South in paper making as a substitute for rags.

CLIMATIC CHANGES .- It is undeniable that very rapid change. From whatever cause it may arise, there can be no question that changes are more sudden and frequent than formerly; and that we cannot now rely, as in days of yore, upon steady heat, or uniform trost and cold. The rigors of the last winter have not been forgotten. Almost throughout variable; and now, before the autumn beauty is finally closed, we begin to have a foretaste of winter cold.
