"Like it? Well, not much. The fel-"An Angel in the Stone."

Once a mighty master sculptor, Walked with idle, aimless feet, Through a glorious, olden city, Down a dim and narrow street; But the instinct of his genius Knew no slumber, found no rest Though the man, to outward seeming, Neither thought nor care oppressed

, thus wandering, close beside him, In a dust heap buried lay, Half exposed, a block of marble, Weather-stained and soiled with clay. Then a subtle inspiration, Lit the sculptor's soul and gave To his willing hands the strength to Wrest the marble from its grave.

But a comrade, while he wrought thus, Wondering, asked him, what he did? He, with strange access of passion, Said, "An Angel here lies hid. In this stony prison, darkling, Pleads for me to form of lightmust break its marble fetters. Lead it forth to mortal sight." So he wrought with care and patience-

Wrought through nights and days of toi Freer from all taint and soil. he wrought until the marble Grew in meaning faint and pale-Till its beauty shone like moonlight Filtered through a cloudy veil.

And, at length, a glorious figure, White robed, white winged, stood confes-Pure and lovely as the angels, Guardians of the good and blest. Then he gave it to the ages.

And the sculptor turned to dust, Yet, e'en now, this marble angel Speaks his patient work and trust Men, my Brothers, fellow workers, Suppliants at the Saviour's Throne, There's a nobler work before us,

Than the Angel in the stone : There's a mightier inspiration Than the son of Genius feels-'Tis the love of "Him that loved us,' 'Tis the trust in Him who heals. In the broad and beaten highway, In the dim retired street, There's work for one in earnest,

There's an aim for aimless feet Scattered in the dust and mire. Dark and soiled with stains of earth Gracious forms of beauty linger, Waiting impulse to find birth. Men with sin-distorted faces.

Women lost to hope and shame, Piteous, neglected children— These our noblest efforts claim. For in each—to God more precious Than the Angel in the stone— Lives a soul fast bound in darkness, That for freedom maketh moan,

Brothers, let us work in earnest To uplift what Christ would save: To restore to life and beauty, What lies darkening in the grave Shrink not from the spots that mar it. Work in patient love and trust, Jesus' blood hath power to cleanse it From the earth stain and the dust,

Labor till it grow in beauty, Under God's own gracious light: Till it gather shape and meaning Patent to all mortal sight; Labor-who shall say but somewhere It may gather such a grace As once shone with heavenly radiance From the martyr Stephen's face!

to God our work we'll render, What then though we turn to dust! It shall speak before the angels Of our patient love and trust.

How they Manage "Topers" in France. —It is perhaps not generally known that the French law, relating to intoxication, is not much milder than some of the enactments of Drace and Lycurgus. The most restrictive clauses are the product of the prolific brain of M. Thiers, and were promulgated by him in 1873. They are sufficient to make the hair of the most inveterate "toper" stand on end, like the "quills of fretted porcupine," and frightfully severe on the ward politician and his jolly myrmidons. We quote this unique specimen of M. Thiers' legislative wisdom verbatim:

Whoever has been punished twice for pub-lic intoxication will be declared, by a third condemnation, incapable of exercising the following rights:

1st. Vote and election.

2d. Eligibility for Parliament.

3d. He cannot be called on or named for

The Salt Lake Tribune tells how a game of cards saved ten miners from destruction by a recent avalanche in Cottonwood Canon. They were going up to the mines, and left the trail and entered an unoccupied cabin to play a game of cards, and had barely got seated when the avalanche slid down the trail which they had left, carrying everything before it.

The Sultan and Satan.

There is an Eastern story of a Sultan who overslept, so as not to awaken at the hour of prayer. So the devil came and waked him servents.

A woman rode home from a ball in Boston on a recent cold night, and the driver, upon hearing the door of the carriage open and shut, supposed she had alighted. He drove away, without having got down from his seat, and left his carriage standing as usual outside of his stable after caring for his horses. The woman, who had been drinking freely, had not got out of the carriage, and was found in it the next morning frozen to death.
