Hard Times.

'How goes the times ?" asked neighbor Of one complaining Joe; Tremendous hard in our town, The mill's shut down, you know;
No money stirs—the times are dull,
And everybody's waiting;
But one thing helps us in the lull,

And that is, first-rate skating.

'That's right,'' says Brown, 'Go in for fun,' While fun is all the go; We were not made to drag along A stupid life, you know.

If times are hard, let's make them soft, And if no money's stirring, Let's raise the wind—set sails aloft— Though better times preferring.

Know this one fact, and set it down, Hard times won't always last; There's better times ahead," says Brown, Than any that have passed. Let's live in hope of better days, This hope will courage give us; 'Twill break the ice that round us lays, And melt it into rivers.

Then we will say, "what fools we were
At trifles thus cast down;
Why, 'tis for us the times to stir,
So true's my name is Brown.
When business is dull let's sharpen it,
Be up and have it grinding;
This course pursued will make us fit
For duty on us binding."

"That is a new idea," said Joe,
With eyelids wide distended;
I did not see, but now I know
For whom wealth is intended. 'Ils not for those who run in vain, But those who run in season; This is the secret way to gain There is no other reason.
