Poetry.

IN THE WEST.

Gather them close to your loving heart—
Cradle them on your breast!
They will soon enough leave your brooding
care:
Soon enough mount youth's topmost stair:
Little ones in the nest.

Fret not that the children's hearts are gay,
That their restless feet will run;
There may come a time in the bye-and-by
When you'll sit in your lonely room and sigh
For a sound of childish fun.

When you'll long for a repetition sweet,
That sounded through each room,
Of "Mother!" "Mother!" the dear love-
calls.

That woe echo long in the silent halls,
And add to their stately gloom.

There may come a time when you'll long to hear
The eager boyish tread,
The tuneful whistle, the clear shrill shout,
The busy bustle in and out,
And patter over head.

When the boys and girls are all grown up,
And scattered far and wide,
Or gone to the undecorated shore,
Where youth and age come never more
You will miss them from your side.

Then gather them close to your loving heart,
Cradle them on your breast,
They will soon enough leave your brooding
care:
Soon enough mount youth's topmost stair—
Little ones in the nest.

Why I Left the Masons.

Want to know why I left the Masons.
Well, I'll tell you, and I rather think you would know, if you got into such a scrape as I did.

Years ago, when I first joined, I was very particular in my attendance at the lodges meeting, much to the disgust of my wife, who, with the whole family, was continually quizzing me about our doings.

I more earnestly remonstrated with her, asserting the riding of the goat was a part of my business, she insisted on knowing all the particulars about the animal, until, to silence her, I said I would bring him home and shoot him.
Of course I never intended to keep my promise, but an unlucky fate ruled otherwise.

One evening about eleven o'clock, as I was plodding home from the lodge, I heard in advance of me a continuous and pathetic bawling, and I soon came up with a large goat standing upon the walk in front of my house.

He evidently lost his bearings, and was wandering away, and being in great grief was crying "I want to go home."

I never liked goats, and my first impulse was to kick this one (and I've always regretted I didn't do it), but the mournful tone of his voice created in me the sympathy for him in my breast, and I patted him kindly on the head and went on. But the goat followed close at my heels, and although I assured him his home did not lie this way but probably down the street he had just crossed, he persisted.

So I went on, and he followed me, and at last, when I was nearly at my door, he came up to me, and with a look of pleading in his eyes, he said "I want to go home."
