ALBION HOTEL,
McGill and St. Paul Streets,
MONTREAL, CANADA.
HAS, for twenty years, been the favorite resort for the transient traveler in the United States, as well as in Canada, when visiting Montreal on business or pleasure. It is centrally located on McGill Street, commanding a magnificent view of the River St. Lawrence, the Victoria Bridge, and a full view of Victoria Park and Mount Royal on the right.
The Hotel is furnished throughout in a superior manner, and everything arranged with a view to the comfort of guests.
As one of the best hotels in the Dominion, having ample accommodation for 500 guests, while keeping in first-class style, the moderate sum of $1.00 per day, will be charged for a comfortable and well-furnished room, with a view of the city, and the traveling community will consult their own interests by remembering the Albion Hotel, when visiting Montreal.

Poetry.
Beautiful Stanzas.
There is no heart but has its inner anguish;
There is no eye but hath its tears bent; There is no voice but hath been heard to sigh.
O'er hours of darkness it can never forget.

There is no cheek, however bright its roses, But faded beneath its hues are hid,
No eye that in its dewy light reposes, But broken starbeams tremble 'neath its lid.

There is no lip however with laughter ringing,
However bright and gay its words may be,
But hushed and tremulous at the thought of O stern affliction and deep mystery.

We all are brothers in this land of dreaming Yet hand and foot and eye to eye replies Nor deem we that below a brow all beaming,
The flower of life in wasted beauty lies.

Oh, blessed light, that glides our nights in sorrow;
Oh, hand of grief for our healing found;
We know that hence will come with the tomorrow,
And the affections spring not from the ground.

Darkness and Light.
"Leave this house instantly! You are no son of mine from this time!" the man roared, and with a gesture of dismissal he pointed to the door.
The woman who had just entered hardly knew where she was going.

THE CHARM OF SUMMER TIME IN THE COUNTRY.
He called at the office to tell about his work, and we made him sit down and write the story out. This is what he wrote to say:

Life in the country is very charming in summer time. We sleep in the spare room in the garret, where the temperature gets up to 101 degrees. The roof has not been repaired since Columbus landed, and consequently it is full of apertures. For anyone who wants to study astronomy while lying in bed, our garret offers phenomenal advantages, but whether it rains at night there is nothing to be done but to make a raft out of the clothes-horse and some bed pads, and float the family until daylight. It is sometimes an exciting apartment. A few nights ago, while lying at a mosquito with a shuck pillow, I knocked a wasp's nest out of one of the rafters, and in the morning we had knots as big as hickory nuts all over our faces and legs.

It is a good thing to live in the country, because the early morning air is so beautiful. We get our morning air very early. The family is routed at 4 o'clock, so that we may go to the harvest field, and if we lie there will be nothing to eat until dinner time. To be country diet is not as attractive as I hoped it would be. We always have a good breakfast, but the children are fast; then we have boiled ham and potatoes for dinner, and cold potatoes and sliced ham for supper. On Sundays we have two kinds of ham and stewed potatoes, and potato pudding for desert—When I was a child, my father used to say they were using all the milk to fatten the calves. They apologized for not having butter because the butler who supplied it hadn't came. I threw out a hint about raspberries, but they said the man at the store was expecting them every day from the city, and I would have to wait. They got their potatoes from the city, too, and the ham was cured in Cincinnati. The only vegetable that grows in cabbage, but we are not allowed to eat it, because they trade it off for the store for potatoes, and the children are so fond of them.

We had for dinner one day a hen that was born during the war of 1812. She ate like a piece of India rubber boot.
One of the finest things about living in the country is the noise, coming in off to some lady spot and lay in luxurious ease upon the grass, dreaming away the hours. And while you are dreaming away the hours, straddle-bugs will crawl up your pantaloons and bite you, and caterpillars will insert themselves in your shirt-collar and neck.
When you get home you find that you have caught a frightful cold from lying in the damp grass, and while you are sneezing you learn that one of the children has fallen out of the hayrack and run a pitchfork through his calf, and that the other one had been pitched over the fence by the Durham bull. —Mac Auler in the Philadelphia Bulletin.

CHANGES IN THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.
Few scholars, even, are aware of the great change through which the English language has passed, in successive centuries. The following are specimens of the Lord's Prayer, as used at various periods in English history:

A. D. 1150.—Fader ur heune, halewe beidh the noume, comin the kin-dom, the will beoth iden in heune and in erthe. The eueren dawe, bridf, giv us this cludawe. And vorseif ur detters as vi yousen ure dettours. And lene us nougt into temptation, but deiyore us of evel. Amen.

A. D. 1300.—Fader ure ure in heune, Haleweid beidh the noume, comin the kin-
in erthe. Our eueren dawe, bridf, giv us this cludawe. And vorseif ure detters give our trespassers. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory for ever. Amen.

A. D. 1881.—Our fadir which art in heaven, halloweid be thy name. Let thy kingdom come. Thy will be done as well in earth as in heaven. And forgive us our trespasses even as we for-
evil. For thine is the kingdom and the power
and the glory for ever. Amen.
