Miscellaneous.

The Old Home.

Childhood's hours I well remember, Altho' my life, like dim Dec-mo-ni, Is dropping to its last;

I think of them, my heart is full, No hours or years can ever

The memories of the past.

To-day I visit the old, old home; As through the time-worn place I roam

I think of days gone by; When I think of hopes that long have fled,

And I think of love that once was true, My bosom heaves a sigh.

And as I wander and behold The rooms so dark and walls so cold,

It makes my heart lament; For fleeting riches I have sought

And found; but found their glory naught But cares and discontent.

Fair childhood's hours have passed away, As on a home I gaze to-day,

Which years ago I left; I think of joys that I once felt,

The joys that in my soul are dwelt—To-day I am bereft.

My later hours of hapless bliss All would I give for one like this,

For one so free from care; Unsullied hour with heart so light,

A young heart conscious free and bright, As light and pure as air.

Ah! there my jack-knife marks I see, Which startle me from my reverie;

How natural they look, Out in the side of the old oak door;

I cut them there some time before I left this sacred nook.

And there upon the window-sill, Are marks which I remember still;

They bring to me quite sympathetic Of scenes in childhood's hours of play,

And happy days long passed away, But still cling to my memory.

I can't forget my silent glaze, And murmuring stream round which I played

By-gone days of yore; Those simple games brought joy and gleam,

And wondrous happiness to me, That now are joys no more.

The gentle murmuring of the stream Seems changed since childhood's glittering dream

Has left this saddened heart; How I have sighed and sought for gold

Since on its vine-clad banks I strolled, And all has left a smart.

O! may I turn from lusts of earth And seek what is of priceless worth,

'Tis in the Bible given, I'll strive to serve a God of love,

That I may win a home above, A glorious home in Heaven.

WILLIE F. WATSON.

CONFESSING THEIR FAULTS.—How

Mr. and Mrs. GRIMES TRIED TO KINDLE AFFECTION THE FIRE OF LOVE AND THE RESULT.—A short time ago Mr. Grimes and his wife were sitting together one evening, and they got to talking about their married life and their past troubles, until both of them grew quite sympathetic and affectionate. At last Mrs. Grimes suggested that it might help to kindle the fire of love in their hearts if they would freely confess their faults to each other and promise to amend them.

Mr. Grimes said it struck him as being a good idea. For his part he was willing to make a clean breast of it, but he suggested that perhaps his wife had better begin. She thought for a moment, and this conversation ensued:—

Mrs. Grimes.—Well, then, William, I am willing to acknowledge that I am the worst tempered woman in the world.

G. (turning and looking at her).—Louise, that's about the only time you ever told the square-truth truth in your life!

Mrs. G., indignantly.—Mr. Grimes, that's perfectly outrageous. You ought to be ashamed of yourself!

G.—Well, you know it's so. You have got the worst temper of any woman I ever saw.

Mrs. G.—No, I haven't either. I'm just as good-tempered as you are.

G.—That's not so. You are as cross as a bear. If you were married to a graven image you'd quarrel with it.

Mrs. G.—That's an outrageous falsehood! There isn't any woman about this neighborhood that puts up with as much as I do without getting angry.

You're a perfect brute, that's the truth!

Mrs. G.—No, it isn't.

G.—Yes it is. You're as snappish as a mad dog. It's five years that could stand the like of you.

Mrs. G.—If you say that again I'll scratch your eyes out.

G.—I dare you to lay your hands on me, you villain.

Mrs. G.—And you, eh? Well, take that! That's the best I can do for you.

G.—You let go of my hair or I'll murder you.

Mrs. G.—I will, and I'll leave this house this very night. I won't live any longer with such a monster.

G.—Well, quit, get out; the sooner the better. Good-bye to you and to your children.

Mrs. G.—I'm sorry I ever married you. You ain't fit to be yoked with any decent woman.

G.—Well, you ain't half so sorry as I am. Good-bye. Don't come back soon.

Then Mrs. Grimes put on her bonnet, and went around to her mother's.

Mr. Grimes hasn't yet confessed what his principal failing is.—Max Adler in Philadelphia Bulletin.

STALE LOVE.—Yesterday

an elderly married couple were passing up State street a lady on the opposite side stubbed her toe and fell down. The old gentleman rushed across the street, raised his hat and offered to assist her in any possible way. His wife followed him across the street, and was witnessing and derision to the stranger she got mad and shook her fist at him.

"It's all right—it's all right," he whispered.

"Yes, I know it is," she hotly exclaimed. "Here an unknown woman stubs her toe and you plough across the street to eat her up with kindness. The other day when I fell down stairs you stood at the bottom and laughed, and chuckled and tickled your ribs, and circled to know if I was practising for a circus!"—Detroit Free Press.

An up-town man, who believes in self-improvement, suggested to his wife recently that they should argue some question frankly and freely every evening, and try to learn more of each other.

One day a question happened to be, whether a woman could be expected to get along without a spring hat, and he took the affirmative, but when he last seen he had climbed up the hay-loft and was pulling the ladder up after him.—Norwich Bulletin.

A Detroit

was called on as a witness in a case before one of the justices lately, and when the oath was administered he raised both hands and said:—

"I shall speak nothing what ain't down it over I hope to die so quick as a minute!"

A further, lamenting in an advertisement

the tricks played on the public by unprincipled men in his own trade, "earnestly requests ladies to bring him their requests and have them converted into muffs and bows."

MANHOOD:

JUST published, a new edition of THE GUY RAVEN'S CENSURELESS ESSAY on the medical care (with out medicine) of Spasmodic, Epileptic, Mental and Physical Impairment, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine, or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure so simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every young and every man in the land. Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, with an address, post-paid, on receipt of six cents or two post stamps.

Address the publishers, F. BRUGMAN & SON, 11 Ann St., New York.
