Agriculture.

How to Make the Farm Pay.—This is a subject in which all our readers are interested, and it is certainly worth examining. As a general proposition, it may be said that the farmer who makes the farm pay the largest returns on the capital and labor employed is the one, other things being equal, who has acquired the most thorough knowledge of the real adaptabilities of the farm, as determined by its soil and its situation as to markets, and who devotes it to the production of such commodities as this knowduction of such commodities as this knowledge will suggest. Each particular farm if managed with a proper reference to these considerations, and to the capacity, habits and condition of the owner should perhaps be managed in some minor details a little differently from any other farm. But take the great mass of forms as they exist in this country to-day, and it will be found that the size of the farms, the character of their soils, their situation as to markets, and their distheir situation as to markets, and their dis-tance from them, the surplus capital avail-able for use in their cultivation, the amount An official ukase has been issued forbidding Russian women from exercising the functions of barristers.
