Depend upon it, the milk trade will gradually affect a great improvement in the cattle of the country. The quart-pot test daily lays bare all short-comings and imperfection, and places them prominently before the notice of the farmer. Wherever practicable cows drafted from the herd should be fattered off on the farm. One important desideratum in the dairy economy of the country is an improvement of the farm buildings. The practice of storshippons prevails to a large extent. We cannot conceive anything more injurious to the health of cattle. We maintain that every animal requires a certain cubic area of
