of Mr. Fleming respecting the Canada Pacific The complete report of the Chief Engineer of the Canadian Pacific Railway was issued

The total expenditure on surveys during the six years from the commencement to De-WARDED the ONLY MEDAL given for Cotton cember, 1876, was $3,139,615.75. The line is located from Thunder Bay to the Yellowhead Pass, and a table shows very favorable

The Chief Engineer, assuming that the South Saskatchewan gradient is to be amended, is enabled to report a location on which, for 1,000 miles west of Lake Superior, east-erly ascending gradients can be kept down one-half of the maximum of the Grand

The length of lines surveyed and explored mount in the aggregate to about 46,000 miles, and 11,000 miles have meen measured through mountain, prairie and forest with level, chain, and transit. Thirty-four lives have been lost in prosecuting the survey. Mr. Fleming recommends opening a territorial road from Lake Superior to Lake Nip-

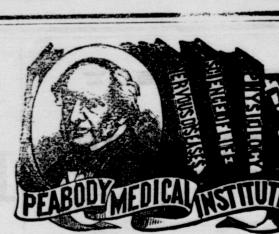

With reference to the Pacific terminus, he says interferences point to the selection of either Burrard Inlet or Bute Inlet or the postponement of a decision respecting the terminus till a further examination of the River Seena has been made. The bridging of the Valdes channel between Bute Inlet and Vancouver he considers unprecedented. General Smyth's report on the military aspect of Burrard Inlet as a terminus states that remote military probabilities should not be allowed to weigh against its many other advantages as a terminus. Late advices received here from the Northwest indicate that the work of construction on those sections on the Canada Pacific Railway which have been placed under contract is progressing with unexampled vigor. The contractor is making all possible haste in order to profit as much as possible by the present cheapness both of labor and matarial. Already a daily train is running from Prince Arthur's Landing on Lake Superior fifty miles westward toward Winnipeg. Another twelve months will make the Manitoban apital as easily accessible as Quebec or Hali-

PROFITS OF COMMERCIAL ENTERPRISE. About the profits of the Hudson's Bay Company there have been grave misrepresentations. In the hostilities between the French and English from 1682 and 1688 they lost £118,014, yet in 1684 a dividend of fifty per cent. was declared, and 1689 one of twentyfive per cent. The capture of fortresses by the French at intervals between 1682 and 1697 cost them £97,500. Yet, shortly after the peace of Utrecht, they had trebled their capital with a call of only ten per cent. on the shareholders. No wonder that in those days and for a long time after a Hudson Bay share was never in the market. An old gentleman (one of the most celebrated, historically, of all the heroes of fur trade, now deceased) told me that when he established Fort Dunvegan on Peace River, near the Rocky Mountains, the regular price of a trade musket was Rocky Mountain sables piled up on each side of it until they were level with the muzzle. The sables were worth in England at least £3 apiece, and the musket cost in all not over £1. The price of a six shilling blanket was in like manner thirteen beavers of the best qualities and twenty of a less excellent description. At that time beaver was worth 32s. per lb., and a good beaver would weigh from 1 lb. to 11 lbs. Gradually the Indians began to know better the price of a musket and of their furs, and to object most decidedly to the one being piled along the sides of the other, which report saith was lengthened every year by two inches, until the barrel reached colossal dimensions. Finally a pestilent fellow discovered silk as a substitute for the napping of beaver hats, and from that date the decline of the Hudson's Bay Company. . .
