Miscellaneous.

THE MCODY MEETINGS .- With reference to the meetings of Messrs. Moody and Sankey, in Burlington, Vt., the Free Press says: No revival meetings held here in this generation have begun to attract such numbers. or create so wide spread an interest. Though the meetings have sometimes numbered four HORSE SHOE NAILS, &c., in a day, and in spite of more rain and mud than we have had in a year, the attendance has been, as a rule, limited only by the capacity of the most capacious Protestant church in our city. The audiences have THE undersigned having bought the interests of W. A. Mooers and J. G. Emery, in the above business, has changed and refitted the Rooms formerly occupied by Mr. Mooers, which from the classes who attend no church and in taste and convenience is second to no Photo-graph Gallery in New Brunswick, and would in-form the citizens of Woodstock and upper Coun-ties that he is now prepared to make belong to no denomination; and the interest has been remarkably sustained. The earn-estness, simplicity and freedom from cant of Messrs. Moody and Sankey, in all their exestness, simplicity and freedom from cant of Messrs. Moody and Sankey, in all their exercises, has impressed every bearer. They are recognized and respected as straightforward, earnest men of God, seeking not their own but others' good. The power of Mr. Moody's discourses, as has often been said, lies not in any graces of oratory, but in his vivid appreciation and earnest presentation of religious truth; in his familiarity with the Bible; in his absorbing sense of the importance of the subject he presents; and in a gift of plain narration and magnetic exhortation. His fame and success, at home and abroad, have not puffed him up. He gives himself no airs. He thinks not of himself, but of his work; and the same is true of lies not in any graces of oratory, but in his but of his work; and the same is true of his co-laborer. The effect of such simple and powerful presentation of the highest truth, cannot but be good in any community; and we doubt not that the meetings here, with God's blessing, will result in large accessions to the churches, and a widening and deepening of the current of religious life in all this region.

A GORGEOUS SPECTACLE.-A London letter-writer says, speaking of the Prince of Wales' Indian presents. I doubt if Solomon ever saw anything so gorgeous as this collection at Bethnal Green. Fancy a whole large glass full of gold and silver gems!—All ablaze with diamonds! Imagine a bedstead whose coverlet, pillows and curtains are made of India shawls of the finest texture ever turned from the looms of Cashmere! Conjure up a dressing gown co posed of the plumage off the back of millions of gorgeous hued humming-birds! See for yourself a palaquin of tortoise shell, inlaid with gold, with downy cushions covered it were diamonds, its web rubies and emeralds. One glass case is full of i-welled swords all of enormous value and great beauty. The handsomest came from Delhi and with its jewelled hilt and scabbard and waistbelt is valued at $50,000.

PROGRESS OF MORMONISM.—Since the death of Brigham Young a remarkable activity has been shown by the leaders of Mormonism; and, if their published accounts be true, the system is still steadily on the increase. The steamship Idaho, which arrived in New York a few day ago, brought among the steerage passengers 137 new Mormon converts. Accompanying them were twelve missionances, who came as cabin passengers, and who have been in Europe during the past two years collecting the 1,500 converts that had arrived at this port during the year. William Paxman, the leader of the missionaries, when asked what they brought to increase the wealth of Utah, replied, "Nothing but bone and sinew."— The converts are mostly in families; two are Swedes and the others English; a few are mechanics, but the most are farmers .-Elder Paxman reported the condition of the Mormons in Europe in a favorable light. His labors had been chiefly confined to the London Conference, which has 20 branches, with 134 elders, 44 priests, 20 teachers, 31 deacons and 891 lay members. MARRYING HIS GRANDMOTHER. - The Nelson (Ky.)
