FARM FOR SALE.
THE subscriber offers for sale his Farm, situated on the main Canada Road, and about three miles from the Village of Fredericton, in the Parish of Simonds, Carleton County. The Farm contains 100 acres of Good Land, 60 of which are in hard wood. There is a good two story House with Barn, Cellar, and a well of water on the premises. The Farm is beautifully situated, containing a splendid view of the John River and within 15 miles of the New Brunswick Railway Station. The owner is selling it on account of ill health.

CARLETON MUNICIPALITY.

January 10, 1877—Continued.

Mr. Stacey had no desire to impute improper motives to Mr. White, but thought the spirit and language of the resolutions reflected upon our representatives. The resolutions were put to the members to try and get the fair share of the by-road money, and of course, implies that they have not so tried.
Is that not a reflection? He differed from Mr. White in his opinion, and it was right they should differ, for men who don't differ on some things, are not men of mind. Mr.
Hayward had pretty fully expressed his views on this subject. He was very much aware that this County did not get its fair share of the by-road money, but then in proportion to population we have not a fair share of resolutions in the Legislature, but that the fact does not go to show that our representatives have not tried to get our fair share.
He believed they had done the very best they could. If all the resolutions were given to this Council there would be a sensible amount for it, each anxious to secure the most for his Parish. But if the money was equally divided, and say each Parish got $300, in what position would they be in case of an emergency such as frequently occurs, as did occur last year, when a bridge broke down, and cost $700 to rebuild.
Where would the money come from in such a case? We should get more, but reserve should be made for building and repairing bridges, and the fact that such reserve imports the importance of such reserve. The bridges might be impossible to repair, and the year. He could not understand from what source the Government could come for such a purpose, after Government had apportioned all the by-road money. The proposition of the resolution may be good, but his experience was opposed to it, and therefore he could not vote for it. We must, in this matter as in others, have something to guard against our selfish propensities. Our experience of last year with respect to resolutions, especially the one at Fredericton, teaches the importance of our having a reserve fund on hand from which to draw for such contingencies.

The Wile's Mistake.

Mrs. Hopgood prided herself on being the best of housekeepers. She was one of those rapid housewives who pursue an atom of dust as a hunter might a stag.
No bold-natured fly ever dared to buzz within her dainty walls. As to purred upon her heartstrings. Plants were ta-boos because their leafy would fall.
Canary-birds were ruthlessly excluded lest they should scatter seed. Sunshine was regarded as an arch enemy, and brings flies, and fades the carpets," said Mrs. Hopgood. As for Mr. Hopgood and the children, they lived mostly in the kitchen.

"I can't have the boys' muddy boots tramping over the carpets, and the girls sowing in the parlor," said Mrs. Hopgood.
"As for Hopgood he don't care where he sits. One place is as good as another where he is concerned."

The Hopgood family also took their meals in the kitchen.
"Help her, Sir!" said the old woman.
"If life is done; but what is death?"
Then in answer to the King, Faint a sunbeam on his ring, Shining by a heavenly light,
"Even this shall pass away."

"Don't be afraid, mother," stammered he, brandishing an empty bottle, as he became dimly conscious of her white scarf and handkerchief. "Go on with your washing. It's a dead jelly at the hotel that it is at home. Freedom forever! Hoo-oo-ray!"

"Oh, what shall I do?" sobbed Mrs.
Hopgood, when the waiters were one more out of the house and the roll of the cub which she had been so anxious to only to think that a son of mine should ever disgrace himself thus."

"It's your own fault, mother," said Benny, the second son. "You wouldn't let Alfy bring his friend here."

"Hold your tongue," sharply retorted Mrs. Hopgood, "wincing beneath the prick of this home truth." "Call Elsie, I need her help."

"Oh, mother!" piped Fanny, the young girl, running down stairs in frantic haste, "Elsie ain't there?"

"Not there?"
"No, mother; she hasn't been to bed all night, and she's not here to be directed to you."

"Open it, mother," said Isaac Hop-good, his skilly.
"This is a sad night for our household. My God! has our home become so distasteful to our children that they fly from it like rats from a tannery house?"

Elsie's note was short enough. It read:
"Dear Mother: I am tired of living in the kitchen. I have run away with John Elton, and before you shall see me again I shall have entered upon a new life in the Province."

Mrs. Hopgood broke out into wild hysterical screeches. Mr. Hopgood read the hurriedly scrawled paper with a face cold as steel.

"Run away with John Elton?" he repeated slowly. "Poor Elsie! then God help her. For he is as great a villain and scoundrel as ever lived, and she has sealed her own doom. Mother! mother! this comes of your house-keeping."

"It wasn't my fault, Isaac," sobbed Mrs. Hopgood, rocking herself backward and forward on a chair into which she had dropped.

"It was your fault," retorted her husband, almost savagely. "You made the very name of home a mockery to your children, and shut your soul inside of a scrubbing-pail, and now you are reaping the bitter harvest."

"Stuff and nonsense!" said Mrs. Hop-good, sharply. "I keep house myself after my own fashion, and I give others leave to do the same."

"But mamma," pleaded Elsie. "I was thinking how I should like to invite all the girls here some evening, and have tea and other things, and trouble faces.
I've been asked out so many times, and I've never responded, and I'm really ashamed to go."

"Then you had better stay at home," said Mrs. Hopgood, polishing vigorously away at the stem of her silver card-receiver. "I think myself with all the young folks in town expiring on my Bussels carpet, and cake crumbs, and muddled cream daubed over everything."

Elsie made no answer, but her countenance quickly fell.
"I wish mamma was like any other mother," she said to herself, the tears obscuring her eyes.
"I think myself with all the young folks in town expiring on my Bussels carpet, and cake crumbs, and muddled cream daubed over everything."

POETRY.
The King's Ring.

Once in Persia reigned a King,
Who upon his signet ring, Graved a maxim, true and wise,
Which, if held before his eyes,
Gave him counsel at a glance,
Fit for every change and chance—Strife, words, and these were they:
"Even this shall pass away."

Trains of camels through the sand Brought a treasure from Samarcand; Fleets of galleys through the seas Brought him pearls to match with these,
But he counted not as gain, Treasures of the mind or main—
"What is wealth?" the King would say,
"Even this shall pass away."

In the revels of his court,
At the zenith of his power,
When the palms of all his guests Burned with clapping at his feet,
He, amid his flattery and wine, Cried: "O, King of living time,
Pleasure comes, but not to stay,
Even this shall pass away."

Fighting on a furious field,
One a javelin pierced his shield,
Soldiers with a loved lament,
Bore him bleeding to his tent, Crying: "O, King of living time,
Pleasure comes, but not to stay,
Even this shall pass away."

Towering in a public square, Twenty cubits in the air,
Stood his statue carved in stone,
The King, disarmed, and alone,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down.

Shook with pale, rose and old,
Waiting at the gates of gold,
The King, disarmed, and alone,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down.

Shook with pale, rose and old,
Waiting at the gates of gold,
The King, disarmed, and alone,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down.

Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down.

Shook with pale, rose and old,
Waiting at the gates of gold,
The King, disarmed, and alone,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down.

Shook with pale, rose and old,
Waiting at the gates of gold,
The King, disarmed, and alone,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down.

Shook with pale, rose and old,
Waiting at the gates of gold,
The King, disarmed, and alone,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down,
Saw his statue's crown fall down.

Shook with pale, rose and old,
Waiting
