FOR THE CARLETON SENTINEL. MR. EDITOR,-Seldom it appears to me that a less satisfactory historical paragraph is quoted than the one in your paper, beginning, "During the days of Henry VIII." and closing, " rather a gloomy picture of the days that are gone ;" for to include the days of the Carleton Sentinel. bluff Harry with the middle ages is carrying the middle too near the end-and was it Alfred's Earl of Northumberland that breakfasted on trenchers and dined on pewter, or Henry's Earl, the father of Dudley and Jane Grey? If the latter, I think the trencher and directly opposite Post Office, up stairs. is a move upon which Mr. McKenzie will be pewter story will hardly be accepted .-
