OUR ENGLISH LETTER. Liverpool, Eng., May 16, 1878. Last week we were very sanguine of peace; this week, however, peace prospects look very gloomy indeed. The most we can do is to hope—hope for that which, to-day, we have no grounds for expecting, but which tomorrow may bring us an honourable and lasting peace—one day we are jubilant over prospects of commercial re-activity, the next we are sent back to our gloomy forebodings. How true is the proverb:—"Blessed is he that expected nothing; for verily he shall not be disappointed."

The strike among the cotton operatives has assumed another aspect, one that will, unfortunately, do their cause no good. Because the masters would not give in to their demands, a mob, at Blackburn, some thousands strong, smashed the windows of the various factories, broke into the employers' houses, destroyed the furniture, and then set fire to the premises and hayricks.
