Poetry.

True Heroism Let others write of battles fought On bloody, ghastly fields, Where honer greets the man who wins, And death the man who yields; But I will write of him Who struggles on through weary years Against himself, and wins

He is a hero staunch and brave, Who fights an unseen foe, And puts at last beneath his feet His passion base and low, And stands erect in Manhood's might, Undaunted, undismayed, The bravest man that drew a sword In fury or in raid.

It calls for something more than brawn

A victory unstained by tears.

An enemy who marcheth not With banner, plume or drum; A foe, forever lurking nigh, With silent, stealthy tread, Beside your board by day, At night beside your bed. All honor then to that brave heart, Though poor or rich he be,

Or muscle to o'ercome

Who struggles with his baser part, Who conquers and is free. He may not win a hero's crown, Nor fill a hero's grave, But truth will place his name Among the bravest of the brave.
