A PLAGUE OF LOCUSTS-The Georgian 20 90 town of Jeslizawetpol. near Tiflis has suffered a plague of locusts almost as bad as that 5 00 which afflicted Egypt in the time of Moses. 5 00 On the 10th of April, the insects invaded the town in such numbers that the merchants had to shut up their shops and walking about the streets was exceedingly difficult. The Russian authorities ordered the inhabitants 10 00 to make a united effort to kill the pests, but the generous people refused, believing it a sin to destroy a locust, until the authorities 10 00 threatened to punish every household who failed to deliver daily a given weight of dead 18 50 insects. The canals were filled with locusts so that water for drinking and washing could only be obtained by straining. The houses swarmed with the creatures and many families went a week without bread because their 20 00 ovens were literally filled with them. They tried in vain to drive the locusts away by 20 00 lighting holy candles and burning incense. The Armenian priests regarded the plague as 10 00 a visitation from God and brought from the neighbouring town the bones of Jacob, which they carried through the streets of the afflicted city in procession, fairly wading through masses of dead and living locusts as they marched along with the relics of the patriarch.
