As above stated, the indications in Canada are hopeful; and hopefulness very naturall inspired by good harvests. Advices from St John are to the effect that the prices of provisions are advancing, and even this is regarded as a good sign. The price of lumber in England having advanced somewhat is an other feature encouraging of itself, although by a counter-balancing advance in freights.

In the upper Provinces trade is becoming more bouyant. The Montreal Witness, last week, says :-

The wholesale trade has on the whole been more active during the past week than was anticipated. In one or two branches, particularly dry goods, there are not wanting complaints, though some merchants even in this line report a very decided improvement. The iron and hardware trade report an improvement both in prices and in volume of as during the whole season, a fair business has been done, and stocks are satisfactorily low. Business in the latter trade has been steady and satisfactory, and prices have advanced somewhat. In no branch has the improvement been so manifest, however, as in the grocery trade. Business continues active and prices are advancing. The advance or store for a very large class. We have no wanting and the advance will follow. From Ottawa and one or two other points highly interested in the lumbering trade, which has almost been extinguished for some years, comes the welcome news that that branch shows some evidence of a revival. This is no United States. If any marked revival occurs in this line it will give an immense impetus to general business in Canada

An act of Parliament will go into force in Great Britain in January next, of a character that proves the rapid advance in that country of public opinion in the direction of strong legal measures for the suppression of intemperance.
