WASHINGTON LETTER. WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 7, 1879. The results of the elections of Tuesday last the more they are considered, seem to beome more unsatisfactory to both parties. At this writing it is uncertain which party has elected its state ticket in New York. In the other states the Republicans generally gain, but of those states Democrats had but little hope. New York and Indiana must be considered doubtful states for 1880; and outside of them the country may be said in the language of the times to be a "Solid South' against a " Solid North." The situation has its embarrasments for all politicians who aspire to Presidential honors. Among the Democratic tickets most mensize in the United States, I shall, in another tioned may be named that of 1876, viz: Tilden and Hendricks ; Bayard and McDonald; and Hendricks and Potter. On the Republican side. Grant with the field to choose from for Vice-President. Blaine and Windom; and Conkling with no Vice-President named. Besides these names, Hancock and of one of the principal streets lined with others on the Democratic side, and Windom country teams, on each side of it, leaving and others on the R-puplican side are menbarely room enough for a passage between tioned for first places on the respective tick-Grant & Tompkins started on their winter's them.
