A GOOD WORD FOR MR. VENNOR .- Mr. Vennor, with but very few exceptions, has confined his weather predictions to certain boundaries, and within those boundaries the weather is nearly always just what is predicted, and the predictions are not at all intended for local application. A newspaper would show just as much and just as little sense in taking a Signal Service weather prediction for the lower lake region and applying it locally to any point in the Eastern States as they show in applying Vennor's predictions locally. For the last days of July he predicted "a cold dip, with frost, and possibly some snow in mountainous regione," and at that time papers published a hundred miles away from the nearest approach to a mountain were anxiously inquirng, "Where are Vennor's frosts and snow?" They were exactly where he said they would be. The frosts were quite severe, but the SENSIBLE AT LAST.—Once upon a time Coral & foreign Items. city a few falling flakes were seen.
