Miscellaneous.

WANTED TO LIVE IN A STAR.—Very near us sat two young people. He wore the face of a man who shaves three times a day and that white necktie had never seen the starlight before. There was pearl powder on his coat, and a tender, dreamy look in her lovely eyes. They sat and looked up at the stars, and didn't care for any solitary thing near to this earth. "Mortimer," she murmured softly,-" Mortimer,"-his name appeared to be Mortimer, though I couldn't learn whether it was his front name or his after name-" Mortimer, dear," she said, "If we could only live apart from this busy and sordid unsympathetic world, in one of yonder glittering orbs of the golden radiance, living apart from all else, forgetting the base things of early life, the coarse greed of the world, and its animal instincts, that would be our heaven.

would it not dear?" And Mortimer, he said it would. "There, heart of my own," he said, and his voice trembled with earnestness, "my own darling Ethel, through all the softened radiance of the night our lives would pass away in an exalted atmosphere above the base-born wants of earthly mortals, and far beyond the chattering crowd that lives but for to-day, our lives refined beyond common ken-And just then the man with the gong to the cabin, upset a chair, ran into a good, sweet old Quaker lady and banged a bad word out of her before she had time to stop it; down the stairs they rushed, collared a couple of chairs at the nearest table, feed a waiter, and opened the action without skirmishing. I am a man of coarse mould and an earth-born appetite myself and I wouldn't live in a star so long as I could find a good hotel in America; but long, long before I could get seats at the table for my family, Mortimer and Ethel had eaten two bluefish, a little rare beefstake, some corn bread, a plate of hot cakes, two boiled eggs, and a bunch of onions. and the waiter had gone out to toest them some > Moral-I have, during my wanderings met several people who wanted to live in a star, where earth-born people with animal appetites couldn't trouble them, and I always found the safest place for an earth-born man, when the star-born soul started for the dinner table, was behind a large rock. Distrust the aspiring mortal who lives on plane so elevaied that he requires the use of a tele-scope when he wants to look down at the rest of us.
