A wretched existence, indeed, is that of a nervous, feeble, dyspeptic invalid. Untranquil repose, mental despondency, poor appetite, misery after meals,—these are some of politics when it says:-" The best N. P. for the experience of such a sufferer. Happily advocating confederation told us a story of precisely the same sort, and we appeared to believe it, and next the inviting countenances of the audience at our late meeting which like those of young robbins stood invitingly open.

Change of views proves nothing. The main precisely the same sort, and we appeared to believe it, and next the inviting countenances of the audience at our late meeting which like those of young robbins stood invitingly open.

Change of views proves nothing. The main purpose of Mr. Blake in his late tour through the Maritime Provinces was to induce people to change their views on political questions.

The important fact disclosed, was simply, Abolish Lt. Gov.'s Private Secretary, 900 care of itself.''
