ZOPESA.

(FROM BRAZIL.)

The New Compound, its wonderful affinity to the Digestive Apparatus and the Liver, increasing the dissolving juices, relieving almost instantly the dreadful results of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, and the TORPID LIVER, makes Zopesa an every day necessity in every house.

It acts gently and speedily in Biliousness, Costiveness, Headache, Sick Headache, Distress after Eating, Wind on the Stomach,

Heartburn, Pains in the Side and Back, Want of Appetite, Want of Energy, Low Spirits, Foul Stomach,

It invigorates the Liver, cancers the Bile, and gives tone to the whole system.

Get this out and take it to your Druggist and get a 10 cent Sample, or a large bottle for 75 cents, and call your neighbor about it.

Speak, history! who are life's victors? Understand the long and say—

Are they those whom the world called the victors, who won the success of the day?

The Martyrs, or Nero? The Spartans who fell at Thermopylae?

Or the Persians and Xerxes? The Judges, or Socrates? Pilate or Christ?

Select Tale.

The Auctioneer's Story

BY IMMOGENE H. SKYES.

This is a strange world! And yet I never thought so until my attention was called to the fact by a little incident that befell me one day, and set me off thinking so hard that I seemed to grow out of my own head and reach a great height, and then I came down on my other feet with a crash, and I don't know that it made me any wiser, but at least, it made me more attentive to my fellow-beings—more thoughtful of their joys and sorrow—and that accounts for something, I reckon.

I had seen dozens of pawnbrokers sales in my time, and never thought anything about them, unless it was that they

Two to One or Five and Take were doubling their money, and making a pretty penny even with ten per cent. commission taken off.

But I never had thought of the story connected with any one article of the sale—the hearthcase, and despair, and my husband's tears. It was but a joke to me, who had known the time when to "spout a watch, or pistol, or some light trinket, in order to carry on a business, and help poor creatures like me, was but the impulse of the moment, and carried no further weight than the relief from empty pockets at the moment.

But, as I said before, something made me think and ever since I haven't been the same. I have been thinking of some heart case that I was, but the impulse have driven into old Two to One's clutter.

The city of B— is a splendid market for our business. The trade done there by one house alone would do any business man's business in any other place, and by the same token, the pawnbrokers equal us in power and profit, and give us some of our biggest sales.

An odd lot came into the warehouse one day, consigned to us by Clutcheon &

Keep, a shrewd firm of new beginners, and as it fell to my duty to ascertain and label the goods, it thus also fell to my fate to have a part in the following story.

The consignment consisted mainly of glass and silver-ware, pictures and bronzes, as Clutcheon & Keep were rather first-class dealers in the business, and did not yet condescend to clothes and family

Bibles; but in the lot I came across a few pieces of furniture, which attracted my attention from the fact of our having an order from a Western house to pick up all the antiques and oddities about, for a batch of new furniture.

Here was about a dozen specimens of clawlegs, stiff-backs, and otherwise uncomfortable household articles, in the shape of chairs, dressing-glasses and cabinets, and I at once labelled them, and thought they might not get into next day's sale, but before I had time to do so, the lot was forwarded at once to our Western customer.

One article alone I noticed with attention enough to remember afterwards, and then only because I struck my hand roughly against it, and the pain made me stop and look at it. It was an old cabinet, brass-bound and clasped, but rusty and forlorn looking enough in its changed fortunes. I labelled it, and thought, for our next day's sale, as there were two others to go West, and the home-maker was then going away for everything old, at either the West or North.

But subsequent events discovered my mistake. Our Saturday sale was a big one—the rival house across on the corner hadn't a chance against us that day;— and my old article put up was bid off very lively and quick.

The crowd had begun to thin, and I was busy mopping my wet face with a fresh handkerchief—for it was warm work, I can tell you, to cry out such sales from ten to ten o'clock—when a lady came back in the store where I was standing and approached me eagerly.

"Are you the proprietor, sir?" she asked, with nervous haste, and I saw she trembled.

"I am the auctioneer, madam," I said, wondering what was wrong. "I will call the firm, if you wish."

She looked around, timidly but eagerly.

"Perhaps you can attend to my business."

"I—I—do—do—not—understand—these matters—very—well," she faltered; and then, I saw she was poorly clad, although well-bred and timid.

I drew an old chair up to the corner,
