A COURTRY OF GREAT ENTERPRISES

A COURTRY OF GREAT ENTERPRISES. DENVER, COLO., April 22, 1882. MESSES. EDITORS,—The population of Colorado has now reached about two hund-red and fifty thousand, but it represents and supports a very much larger number of peo-ple. A mining town in the mountains with three hundred persons will probably not in-clude over a score of ladies or a dozen child-ren. The miner's family is East. Only in Denver is there the ordinary proportion of women and little people. Hence the general reader will be little surprised at the great amount of capital invested in Colorado. the amount of capital invested in Colorado, the magnitude of its mining interests, and the extent of its railways. This State has as ample railway facilities as Iowa, while the latter has seven times the population. But it is not alone in mining and railway enterprises that Colorado is large. The State
