Baby in Church. Aunt Nellie had fashioned a dainty thing, Of hamburg and ribbon and lace. And Mamma had said, as she settled it 'roung Our beautiful Baby's face, Where the dimples play and the laughter lies Like sunbeams hid in her violet eyes—

If the day is pleasant and Baby is good,

She may go to church and wear her new hood," Then Ben, aged six, began to tell, In elder-brotherly way, How very, very good she must be If she went to church next day He told of the church, the choir and the crowd, And the man up in front who talked so loud; But she must not talk, nor laugh nor sing, But just sit as quiet as anything.

And so, on a beautiful Sabbath in May. When the fruit-buds burst into flowers, (There wasn't a blossom on bush or tree So fair as this blossom of ours). All in her white dress, dainty and new Our Baby sat in the family pew. The solemn hush and the voice of prayer

Filled all her baby soul with awe, As she sat in her little place, And the holy look that the angels wear Seemed pictured upon her face. And the sweet words uttered so long ago "Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven," said He, And I knew that He spake of such as she.

The sweet-voiced organ pealed forth again, The collection box came round. And baby dropped her penny in, And smiled at the chinking sound Alone in the choir Aunt Nellie stood, Waiting the close of the soft prelude, To begin her solo. High and strong She struck the first note, clear and long

She held it, and all were charmed but one, Who, with all the might she had, Sprang to er little feet and cried "Aunt Nellie, you's being bad!" The audience smiled, the minister coughed The tenor-man shook like an aspen lead And hid his face in his handkerchief.

How she finished that terrible strain. But says that nothing on earth would tempt Her to go through the scene again So, we have decided perhaps 'tis best. For her sake, ours, and all the rest, Ere our Baby re-enter the family pew.

PNEUMATIC CASH BOYS.—New inventions are constantly attracting and astonishing us. Not the least among recent ones is that of a Philadelphian who has invented an arrangement of pneumatic tubes to be used in business establishments as a means of carrying cash and returning change. This system has been adopted by one of our leading dry goods houses (Jordan, Marsh & Co.), and crowds enter the store daily to behold the working of this curious apparatus. A cluster of hollowebrass tubes are grouped together at the corner of the different counters on the ground floor, and these tubes, rising for a certain listance under the flooring, appear again ard reach a focus on the second floor, where, within a walled-in circle are the lady cashiers. A customer down stairs pays for his purchase ; bill and money are put up by boys in charge of the tubes into a small tube opening like a box about four inches long and three in diameter; this is closed, placed in the opening of the brass conductor, and when a certain spring is touched a report follows, sounding like uncorking of a soda-water bottle, and the small tube containing the money flies with the rapidity of lightning into the conducting tubes personage than the Sergeant at-Arms of the and urged by the current of air falls in a sec-House of Commons, Mr. D.
