SALT AND PORK DUTIES. The House of Commons being in Committee of Ways and Means, on concurrence, Mr. Burpee, of Sunbury, spoke in opposition to the salt duty and contended that if on principle the farmers were to be protected the duty on pork should be increased. In re-SIR LEONARD TILLEY .- The hon. member said he would be brief, but his brief was not as brief as he led us to expect. I must congratulate the hon. member upon his becoming an advocate of the National Policy. He complained in the first place, that we had not increased the duty on pork. Now, practically, we have increased the duty on pork, because, previous to the passage of the tariff. it was I cent a pound on 185 lbs, and now | wide dark collars and pants. $2 a barrel is collected instead of the $1.85 collected before. There. | Percheron.' fore, there is no increase of duty in the matter. With reference to the salt duty, the hon, gentleman says it is an imposition on the Maritime Provinces. A short time ago, a party in the city of St. John started the business of grinding coarse salt, and manufacturing it into butter salt; therefore, there is a competition between salt coming into the country under the tariff and the salt from the west. Everywhere the grinding may not be done with the rolling-pin, but it could be done everywhere. It is done in Yarmouth. The hon, member says the importation on

I ask the bon, gentleman if any sensible man in this country would dry meat for the purpose of sending it across the border and pay an additional duty on it, when he can send hams green for 1 cent. a lb., and thus save the trouble of drying.

SIR LEONARD TILLEY.—The hams are no

IRVINE -It is not green hams, it is only the dried hams that are mentioned .-That is a great protection to the farmers.-The hop, gentleman must have a vast amount when you can take green hams across for nothing, that you dry them for the sake of paying 2 cents per lb. on them. That argument is of a piece with all the rest. They and two sleighs. insult the farmer and then try to humbug him. It is bad enough to go out into the streets and talk such nonsense to an ordinary of Finance, who understands figures as well as he does, to try to stuff the House with it. When he says that I cent, per lb. duty, or $2 on the barrel, is equal to 20 per cent. you ought to laugh at him. There has not been a day for ten years in any market in Canada, when our pork has sold for $2 a drugs, chemicals, &c, but his horse was too barrel.
