WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our own Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 29, 1882

There are a great many people who want the Capital of the United States to "go west and grow up with the country." There are others who insist that the Capital should never be removed from Washington's Monument, and the Potomac swamps. Dissapointment will be the lot of both classes, for the East, North, and South would prefer the present locus of the Capital rather than to surrender it to their lusty eastern rival, and while Washington cannot be removed from the Potomac swamps, the swamps are to be removed from Washington. Halleujah! An appropriation of nearly half a million had been made for the reclamation of these swamps. The plan is to transform these vast plains of soggy vegetable putridity into smiling lakes and parks. There is some fear that the President will veto the bill but it is impossible to believe anything so monstrous from a christian. Leading members of the House say that they are confident the bill will be signed. The weight of opinion is in favor of the bill becoming a law, though those that say it will be vetoed speak in very positive terms, and claim to speak by authority. The Cabinet considered the bill at a meeting held last week, so if a veto was decided upon the President will not have to await the Friday meeting of the Cabinet. It is thought his action on the bill will be known by to-morrow.

It seems to be generally conceded that the removal of the internal revenue tax reduction bill from the Senate, and the river and harbor bill from both houses increases the chances of adjournment. The Senators and members who said last week Congress could adjourn by Monday next said this afternoon that an adjournment was still possible then, but not very probable, on account of the unknown amount of time that may be used up on naval appropriation bill, which proved to be even more fruitful of debate than was expected. There is but one opinion in regard to the tax reduction proposition, and that is that Senator Beck was correct when he said the funeral services were preached on it to day. It goes over, therefore, until next session.

Commissioner Raum reports to Secretary Folger that the entire collections of internal revenue for the past fiscal year have been accounted for and turned into the Treasury. The whole sum collected was $146,520,273 71. During the past six years the sum of $748,831,071 has been collected from this source without loss by defalcation. The expenses of collections for the past fiscal year will not exceed $5 108,300, being less than 3½ per cent. of the whole. The combinations among illicit distillers in some parts of the country to evade the law have been broken up, and the relations existing between the tax-payers and the revenue officers are harmonious.

The President will make a visit to New York city after the adjournment of Congress. He will remain there about ten days. He has made no further arrangements for the summer. It is probable, however, that he will make a trip along the sea-coast in the United States steamer "Dispatch," which is now undergoing repairs and improvements, and which is expected to arrive in this city on the first of August.

The prosecution in the Star Route Cases are much encouraged with the appearance of matters just now. It was said at the Department of Justice to-day that the conviction of some of the indicted parties was almost certain.

FOREIGN LETTER.

(Regular Correspondence.)

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, July 13, 1882.

In the afternoon of the first day of the bombardment vast clouds of smoke hung drifting over the city of Alexandria and flames were rising from one wing of the Khedive's Palace as well as from the buildings under the Pharos. The forts on shore were replying with only an occasional gun, but Gabara and one or two others had not been silenced.

Suddenly the two ironclads ceased to send from their sides those thick rings of whirling smoke with the firey centre, and a strange quiet ensued, which was followed by the slow departure of these two war ships from the vicinity of the shore.

They had seen and answered a signal from the Admiral to cease firing. Thus practically ended the work of those terrible nine hours, during which, for the first time, England's mighty modern artillery had spoken forth in anger. None then knew on board the fleet what havoc of life and limb lay behind the crumbled masonry and shattered earthbanks which could be seen. The Egyptians had stood up gallantly, and must, all knew, have paid heavily.

Egyptian darkness now settled upon the scene of wrath and destruction. The great war ships were one by one withdrawn from their positions, feeling their way with the utmost caution through the shoals and narrow passes of the harbor and its approaches. Arabi had of course extinguished all guiding lights, and only the gleam of a few lamps marked the city. The vessels of the fleet were eventually ranged in a line, with an offing of about three miles, and, all night long, bright, searching beams of the electric light played along the water from the top of each ironclad, falling sometimes in patches of sharp radiance on the low lying coast. There must have been fresh terror for Arabi's men in those piercing midnight rays of mysterious glitter which lit up the sea in quest of boats or torpedos, and then suddenly flashed and flickered along the land.

This morning dawned dull and cloudy, and the sea was leaden-colored. In the stillness of this heavy unusual weather the flags of all the fleet were seen to be lowered at half-mast, and one of the gunboats presently was observed stealing around among them, collecting the dead. These were only five or six in number, and did not include a single officer. The losses on Tuesday were really very light considering the length of the engagement. This was chiefly due to the fact that Arabi's men had moving targets to aim at, and could hardly get off two consecutive rounds without a monstrous shell breaking like a volcano amidst them or a hail from the deadly Gatlings scourging them away from their platforms.

When the funeral ceremony had been completed the ironclads and their plucky little consorts once again ran their fighting flags up to the peak, and rode to their anchors, or slowly forged ahead, all stripped for action and in fighting order.

Those nearest shore could now distinguish with their glasses dismounted guns, parapets crumbled to a dust heap, timber and masonry and munitions of war in confusion —the result of Tuesday's terrible work— while not only the palace behind, but portions of the city, as I say, smoked and glared.

The Egyptians had fought much better than was expected. They have well earned the honor of being the first to face throughout a long day the most tremendous artillery fire ever opened in any war-fare. Nor can it be said that ignorance made them bold, for the first few rounds from the heavy guns produced effects positively frightful to witness even from a point of safety, while to have stood under such avalanches of iron without flinching proves the Egyptians to have some good stuff among them.

UNDER THE BAN.—Considerable excitement has been caused among the French Canadians of Quebec, by the issue of a pastoral letter, on Sunday, placing the Courrier Des Etes Unis, of New York, under the ban. Archbishop Taschereau tells his flock: "The duty of our pastoral charge obliges us to-day, most beloved brethren, to warn you against a terrible danger which threatens the morals of our flock." His Lordship does not designate the special article in the newpaper for which he so severely denounces it, but says that it "has been brought under our notice as containing infamous novels." He invites the faithful to "eschew the newspaper as a plague, lest they have also part in the punishment of the banned newspaper, temporal and eternal." As Quebec is an extremely Roman Catholic Province, the ban must have a serious effect on the newspaper in question.—New York Herald.

DUBLIN, July 27.—A desperate but unsuccessful attempt was made to assassinate the Recorder of Dublin at Green street Court House. A tutor named Fitzpatrick, who was non-suited as plaintiff on a civil bill process, fired at the Recorder with a revolver in open court, but fortunately was seized by the defendant and a policeman.

*The celebrated Vegetable Compound for females, which, within a few years, has made the name of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham known in every part of the civilized world, relieves suffering by the safe and sure method of equalizing the vital forces and thus regulating the organic functions. It is only by such a method that disease is ever arrested and removed.
