MICHIGAN LETTER. MACINAW ISLAND, MICH., Oct. 4, 1882. EDITORS SENTINEL, - Dear Sirs: This beautiful little Island with its traditions, its many romantic and historical associations, some extending back two and a half centuries, others still within the memory of people now living, lies within the straits of the same name, but a few miles from the main land and is easily ascessible to either the northern or southern

As many of your readers know but comparatively little about 1t, a short description of it, may be of some interest. It is the most picturesque of any on the lakes, and here nature displays all her grandeur. Indian tra-dition makes this Island the home of the Giant fairies, it was regarded with awe by that race, and here the different tribes astembled for Council. It was called by them land is of rock formation and reaches in many places an elevation of from two to three hundred feet above the level of the lake. Velvets, Silks, Satins, The action of the elements for ages upon the porus rocks has formed many wonderful curiosities, such as Lover's Leap, around which circles a very pretty story of maiden's fidelity; the Arched Rock, a great natural wonder; The Devil's Kitchen, a weird appel-MANTLE GLOTHS; ation to a singular freak of nature; The Giant's Stairway, Pontiac's Lookout, Chimney Rock, the whitened walls of old Fort Macinaw on the hillside, built by the English in 1780, original block houses still standing intact; the soldiers' cometery, carrying one back a century and a half; the remains of old Fort Holmes; the parade ground; the buildings of the old Fur Company, some of them nearly a century old; the beautiful quiet little village, extending from the pebbly shores of the cresent-shaped harbor back to the rocky cliffs upon which stands the U.S.

Father Marquette and other Jesuit missionaries, established missions here, and at Ignace, Sault St. Marie, and old Fort Macinaw, in 1642. The Island contains 2 221 acres, LASGOW HOUSE.

the sublime to the ridiculous, is a common saying, it certainly was so in my case, for I had gotten but a few rods away from the Fort, when two curs dashed out from behind a clump of trees, and one caught me by the coat tail; vanished in an instant all my dreams of the enchanting scene I had just witnessed, and hydrophobia with its frightful horors passed through my mind; the brute was a terrier, and I whirled him round three times before I could kick him loose. Two soldiers then appeared on the scene, and called the MANCHESTER HOUSE

Texas, and I was well acquainted with some of the officers of their command.

One of the hotels here is named the John Jacob Astor House, it was the headquarters of the American Fur Company when Astor was its president and principal owner. I saw his old iron sale, and also the copy of a map of the great lakes, and the Mississippi River. drawn by Father Marquette, in 1672. Lake Michigan is called Lac-de-La Illinois, and the Mississippi, river de-la-Conception. I saw quite a number of very large apple trees, planted by the Indians seventy-five years ago; I ate some of the apples, they were very hard and sour, and appearad to be of the same variety, that I used to hook from old Captain Phillips' orchard when I was a boy.

The climate during the months of July and August is delightful, and hundreds come here every summer to be cured of catarrh, and hey fever. The hay fever association of the U. S. are negotiating with the Government for the purchase of Round Island (1,800 acres) and if they succeed in getting it, it will be made a lovely place, and thousands will spend their summers there. The fish (Macinaw trout and white fish) are splendid.

The Congregationalists have bought sixty acres about one mile from town, and will build cottages and arrange the grounds for annual camp meetings. A number of wealthy men from Chicago and Detroit are building cottages, and their families will spend theerum mer here; visitors are increasing every season; the climate. Seenery, and fishing will

A Terrible Tragedy.—Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 19.—This forenoon, a few minutes after ten o'clock. Gen. Joseph A. Mabry, Major Thomas O'Connor and Joseph A. Mabry, Jr., were killed in a shooting affray. The difficulty began yesterday afternoon by Gen. Mabry attacking Major O'Connor and threatening to kill kim. This was at the fair grounds, and O'Connor told Mabry it was not the place to settle their differences. Mabry then told him he should not live. It seems Mabry was armed and O'Connor was not. The cause of the difficulty was an old feud about the transfer of some property from Mabry to O'Connor. Later in the afternoon Mabry sent word to O'Connor that he would kill him on sight. Bry tried to rise but fell back dead. The whole tragedy occurred within twenty minutes, and neither of the three spoke after he was shot. A bystander was painfully wounded in the arm, and four other men had their clothes pierced by buckshot. The affair caused great excitement and Gay street was thronged with thousands of people. Gen. Mabry and his son Joe were acquitted, only a few days ago of the murder of Moses Lusby and Dan Eusby, father and son, whom they killed a few weeks ago.
