IMPRESSIONS OF CARLETON COUNTY.

First impressions are not always the best, but my first impresions of your excellent county have been deepened by each visit. Having visited every part of your fruitful province, except the two counties beyond you, the latest additions to the family, I have no hesitation in giving the palm to Carleton, viewed all round as a beautiful and fertile county. Of course, in this matter as in many others, some observers will differ from my judgment, especially the dwellers of the Sussex Vale; but notwithstanding the many points of excellency possessed by Kings, I think you excel even that riebly favored county.

The natural beauties you possess, the exquisite pastoral scenery both along the banks of the river, and also in the interior of the county, are not in "odds and ends," but a complete gallery of nature's richest gifts. Many of the rich landscape scenes are expressive poems, which the poverty of language cannot articulate. Thoughts too deep for words flood the soul as the pensive observer rests the quiet eye upon the bedecked and spangled cloak of Mother Nature. While visiting recently one rich part of your county, Victoria Corner, I was deeply impressed with the ornate natural surroundings of the place—surroundings truly objects of delight, and fruitful sources of cherished reflection. Going one day to the brow of the hill behind the residence of E. M. Shaw, Esq., the well known and esteemed farmer and stock raiser, whose large farm, so well arranged and cultivated, is an evidence of skill and thrift, I looked upon a fair scene of rare beauty and excellence; whichever way the eye was cast the mind received new impressions of delight. Looking across the river, Hartland, cosily nestled by the river's brink, backed by the ascending slope of its teliest view; and looking up and down the river as far as eye could scan was presented a panorama of overlapping beauties:—

"Beauty—a living presence of the earth,
Surpassing the most fair ideal forms
Which craft of delicate spirits hath composed
From earth's materials—waits upon my steps,
Pitches her tents before me as I move,
An hourly neighbor."

Good natural surroundings. None who esteem manifested Deity can fail to appreciate.

A thing of beauty is a joy forever,

The natural graces of your county are such as to win affection and deepseated admiration.

Much satire and ridicule have been pourcd upon the teaching of Oscar Wilde, but many excellent grains of wheat are to be found among much that is chaff. Long before Oscar Wilde paraded his silk stockings the truth was received that our surroundings give form and color to our character, a truth indisputable both as regards individuals and nations. In estimating both, geographical relations as well as moral and physical relations should be considered.

In Scotland we have marked features in character, as between the inhabitants of the Lowlands and the Highlands, and geographical relations have much to do with the contrast. The same is true as between the people of the north of England and the people of the south of England.

It is a fact of experience, we partake of our surroundings in every senee, both as regards the character of our companionship, home and big house filling our every senee. If that is so, how grateful should be every inhabitant of Carleton County for so many tokens of heavenly beneficence! How all should appreciate so much common to all, the poorest as well as the more affluent, that tends to ennoble and elevate. It is impossible to overestimate the silent enriching influences of choice and beautiful forms of exquisite beauty. If we fully entered into the richer spirit of life, as we should, what a strong cord of attraction you possess to retain in your fair county those who are just now imbued with a hungering thirst for gold, and who flee to the melancholy shades of sand and morass. It is sad to learn ever and anon of young men, leaving a county so richly favored for scenes of bleakness and barrenness, simply to feed the gold hunger. If farming was unremuncrative; if the soil was sterile; if the climate was wretched; if overpopulation was afflictive, then it would be easy to account for the disposition to seek other fields of labor. But such is not the case. Men of experience declared unto me that they were doing well, and facts abundant sustained their statements. Many have grown rich, and have to spare, and that by farming. Testimony as to the land as well as observation conclusively declares that none better can be found in the Province. As to the climate it is healthy and bracing, free from the humid influences of counties near the sea coast. Indeed, its many advantages and growing priviliges are such that are not excelled in the Province.

Permit me to call further attention to the emigration fever. While many are suggesting various remedies cannot the pulpit do something? Is it not possible to call attention to the higher view of life? To make men and women Christians is not the sole end of ministerial life; it is the chief. But there is the right view and use of life. There are intellectual gains and prizes, as well as moral and spiritual attainmeuts. There is the educating and developing the whole man. Toil for gain is but one duty of life; and when needful wants are supplied and fair provision has been made for dependent ones upon the bounty of our labor, and reasonable forecast has been made for prospective old age, we have named the full demand. But alas! too often that narrow limit is not satisfying; "by leaps and bounds" the spirit of the age seeks to be rich. Too often this spirit takes possession of the whole man and converts and binds every energy to that one end and purpose. Balanced life regulates our wants, and as we regulate our wants so is our happinees. A statesman once said:—"My riches do not consist in the extent of my posessions, but in the fewness of my wants." And a poet has said:—

"Man wants but little here below
Nor wants that little long."

But he was a poet, and as one has said, "to be a poet is to be a poor man." Formerly it was so, but even poets now-a-days have got what Carlyle called the "earth hunger."

Is there not a lopsided view of life? Is there not too much feeding of youthful ambition with stories of bootblacks who have become merchant princes. Is there not a constant appeal to "earth hunger," at the cost of other nobler aims and ambitions? What are money bags in comparison to the richer possessions of life? The harvest of rich intellectual and moral gifts unfolded in the best wealth of life, a full orbed character. Such a life is a treasure to the world, and posseeces a value byeond the computation of dollars and cents. For the formation and development of such a character, you posscss in your county ample means. To increase your educational and moral facilities, is the desire of the best men throughout the county; and in so doing you are binding your young people to the home they must ever cherish. S.

Barrington, N.S., Oct. 24th, 1882.

LITERARY NOTICES.—The November number of that excellent family magazine, The Cottage Hearth is to hand with its various departments well filled with varied and interesting household reading. There are portraits and sketches of distinguished men, superior home music, floral articles, stories and adventures, choice poetry, the latest fashions, the mother's chair, the student's corner, the young folks' window, all finely illustrated. The price of this magazine is $1 50 a year. We will send the SENTINEL and The Cottage Hearth, to any address, post paid, for one year for $1.75.

The November number of Wide Awake is noticeable for many pleasing features; among them a spirited frontispiece for Rev. I. L. Beman's frontier story of "Levi's Bedspread," by Walter Shirlaw, sent over from his London studio, and two fine illustrated poems, "Mistress Mary," by Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, and "The little Queen," by Susan Coolidge. Next, one notes that both Serials, "The Trojan War" and "Lost among Savages," are concluded, double installments being given for that purpose. There are two gay reminders of Thanksgiving month: Rosa Graham telling of "Tom Wee"—how he made Thankful-Day resolves, and M. E. Wilkins relating the merry myth of "The Pumpkin Giant." Part II. of Miss Whitney's "A Suit of Homespun" deals with flax wheels and "blue'n copperas check," with fourteen illustrations by Bodfish. Margaret Bertha Wright sends over from her home in France a comical story of "Charlie's first Doughnut;" Rev. Wm. E. Baker, who had a ghost story in the October number, tells of "Another Ghost" he once saw; Miss Harris furnishes a very interesting and romantic art paper relative to an American Boy Sculptor who is studying and working in France. The article is illustrated with portrait of the young sculptor and pictures of his bronzes. Rev. E. E. Hale writes about his recent visit to the House of Lords, and Arthur Gilman has as usual a capital Dictionary paper. Charming poems, Tangles, a song from Lord Houghton set to music by Fred' K Archer, and the Chautauqua Young Folks' Reading Union Course complete a first-rate number; "Anna Maria's Housekeeping," Prof. Sargent's Health and Strength Paper, and the article on Mary Russell Mitford, of the C. Y. F. R. U. Course, deserve thoughtful perusal.

Only $2.50 a year. D. Lothrop & Co. Publishers, Boston, Mass. (See Prospectus for 1883, and announcement for the magnificent Christmas issue.)

The sectional safety boiler is manufactured expressly for the "North West" trade. This boiler is so arranged that it is readily taken apart in sections; enabling purchasers to clean thoroughly every part of it and prevent burning out. We know from experience this is absolutely necessary with the alkaline waters of the great Western prairies. Largely used by the Pacific Railway Company and all the large Colonization and Ranche Companies.
