Looking back upon the year, thankful for having escaped from evils that have so prostrated others ; thankful for the sure and permanent advances that have been made, let us indulge the hope that 1882 will see this community-the destroyed part of this town restored-advancing still more rapidly with the accession of many new industrial establish

The building is situated on the corner of Mgip and Enerald streets, being 52 feet on Main street and 75 feet on Emerald ; it is four stories, and is most thoroughly built throughout; the finish is plain, but neat and in harmony with the proportions of the edifice. Perhaps the best compliment that can be paid the architect and reaster builder is to quote Mr. John Gibson's own words :-"I am perfectly satisfied with Mr. Turner : he has done me full justice, and given me an excellently planned and built house." Under the entire building is a fine cellar, with a substantially built, hollow stone wall, lined incide with brick, 71 feet high from floor to ceiling. The cellar is entered from without, through the wood shed, by wide double doors, and from the kitchen by a 34 stairway of easy ascent, and is lighted by six iron barred windows on the south side. The celler contains a cistern, the walls of which are 12 inches thick, built of brick, lined with English cement, containing two filters and having a capacity of some sixty-five hogsheads. The cistern will be filled by the galroof of the building. Coming up out of the those. cellar we enter the kitchen, 15x26, which bas! tern below, the former from a well just out- | Debenture due the 5th inst.
