"The talk about what counties shall have the offices is mostly humbug, and very cheap humbug at that, and if we want able men in the Government, we must secure a place for them on the floor of the Assembly."

Such are the terms used by a writer in the Telegraph, we think it was, some weeks ago. One would think from the language used by some that, when a representative from a particular county secured a portfolio, his office and his clerks and its business were all removed into his county, instead of remaining a fixture at Fredericton. Furthermore there is an impression on some minds that the head of a department can so exercise the functions and patronage of that department as to favor the county which he represents and its people. This is an absurd idea and only implies that a head may unjustly dispense patronage, taking from some what he bestows on others. The fact is that perhaps the best position for a member to occupy having regard only to the interests of his constituents, is the position of being an independent supporter of the Government without office, and the next best position is, when parties are pretty evenly divided, to be an ndependent opponent of the Government. One thing we often hear, and that is that in order to secure Government patronage a representative must support the Government. rule by our Local Governments.
