A SONG OF TIME. How worn a theme is that of time Then why do I begin to rhyme Upon it now?

Because to nigt the air is filled With voices that will not te stilled-

Of all that Time sweeps in his flight The voices sing to me to-night, Time cures all care.

O voices singing, be you mute.

Yet filling all the air around With a sweet melancholy sound, A song of Time

Long days ago? Be still! be still! that sad refrain! I dare not listen once again

Maybe I hold these days too high, And yield them far too oft a sigh, Those days long since

That happy time?

I'll bury, then, within the grave

Nor heed a voice which whispers low, The sweetest sorg is that you know

DEAR SENTINEL,—Your many readers may be interested to learn something of this western country. Rice River presents a lively scene this winter. Among the many firms doing business in this section, is that of Gueta & Watson, and here I may mention that Mr. Watson is another evidence of what N. B. boys can do. He left his home in the village of Andover some seven years ago to seek his home in the West, and by honest industry and sobriety is to-day occupying a prominent place among the business men of the County.

The scene of operation is some 400 miles north of Lake of Woods and 80 west of Lake This is the first winter lumbermen have invaded the home of the Indian, hundreds of whom are scattered throughout the country; they belong to the Chippewa tribe, which has in nearly all instances been friends of the whites. The Sioux Indian also made this their home, but, just before the close of the late civil war, they rose and massacred men, Indian living in a village dies, a little house, This is the savage's idea of cheating the by the living, food is the only thing that en-
