This gives the conclusions to the author's mind regarding Canada as a whole, gained by a visit made on his own responsibility. It is a candid and favorable opinion of the farming qualities of the country, and is filled with matter of great interest to his countrymen. But while there is something said of Nova Scotia, Quebec and Ontario, and a good deal of Manitoba and P. E. Island, there is nothing, except a few words about Moncten, Brunswick. This is to be regretted; but it appears to be our usual fate. The pamphlet, however, should, if well circulated in Britain, be of service to the Dominion. Its style is interesting and the information is given, as Canada was seen, in a practical way.
