ADAMS, N. Y. Jan 30, 1882.
DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., GENTS:—Having used a good deal of your Kendall's Spavin Cure with great success, I thought I would let you know what it has done for me. Two years ago I had as speedy a colt as was raised in Jefferson County. When I was breaking him, he kicked over the cross bar and got fast and tore one of his hind legs all to pieces. I employed the best farriers, but they all said he was spoiled. He had a very large thorough pin, and I used two bottles of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and it took the bunch entirely off, and he sold afterwards for $1800. I have used it for bone spavins and wind galls, and it has always cured completely and left the leg smooth.
It is splendid medicine for rheumatism. I have recommended it to a good many, and they all say it does the work. I was in Witherington & Kneeland's drug store, in Adams, the other day and saw a very fine picture you sent them. I tried to buy it but could not; they said if I would write to you that you would send me one. I wish you would and I will do you all the good I can. Very respectfully, Voris, one of the leading farmers in our county, sprained an ankle badly, and knowing the value of the remedy for horses, tried it on himself, and it did far better than he expected. Cured the sprain in very short order.

Poetry.

THE INNERMOST ROOM.

The Singer sang the world a song,
And soon in every tender heart
Its melody, so sweet and strong,
Became a dear and lasting part.
But no one knew, and no one cared,
That room supremest grief and wrong
His breaking heart had learned the notes
That trembled into glorious song.

A woman, who from every cup
Had drunk life's glad and bitter streams,
Sat down and wrote a wondrous tale,
As sweet and fair as fairy dreams.
But no one knew, and no one cared,
From what tumultuous seas of thought
The soul in lonely voyages
Its parable of love had brought

The Teacher, with a burning heart,
With tongue as swift and hot as flame,
Led with a wise and tender heart
The world unto its highest aim.
But no one asked, and no one knew,
Through what fierce conflict, day by day,
He won the victory which cleared
For weaker hearts the higher way.

For each soul has one inner room
Where all alone it seeks the grace
To struggle with the sharpest woe,
Its hardest destiny to face,
To lift the duty that it fears,
To love, to trust, through every doom,
And not the nearest, dearest heart
Goes with it to that inner room.

'Tis there that souls learn how to sing;
'Tis there the truest knights are made;
There, with the sharp edge of her sword,
Great Sorrow gives the accolade.
From thence they come with subtle strength
The weary and the sad to lift;
But who remembers that lone room,
Its strife and doubt, its grief and gloom,
From which they bring the precious gift?

Select Tale.

AUNT JEMIMA ON THE WOMAN QUESTION.

Aunt Jemima gave a real old-fashioned quilting party the other day in honor of a niece who was visiting her, and freed her mind in this little lecture to her guests, who were all young girls:

'We are livin' in a fast age—a progressive age, they call it, when women are a puttin' on airs and a settin' up to be the equals of man. 'Twant so when I was a gal. Women didn't then pretend that they'd a right to vote and sing bass, and speechify in public. Gals did not go galivantin off to colleges and universities, and rack their brains over ologies and furrin' lingoes, till they was turned inside out.

'Do you suppose that, if I'd a ben one of that sort of young women, Solon Pettibone would ever have took a fancy to me, and chose me out of twenty other gals that was just a dyin' for him? For Squire Pettibone, who's weepin' relict I now am, was a great man in his day a member of the school committee, a justice of the peace, head of the board of selek men. He served two terms in the State Legislature, and was even talked of for Congress!

'He was a man of deep larnin', and great powers of mind. He read a good deal, but it was mostly in science books, too deep for me. Whenever in his weekly newspapers, he come to a artikle headed 'Women's Spere', Advice to Wives', and such like, he'd insist on readin' it to me even if I had to leave my salt risin' a runnin' over, or the dinner table a-standin' in the floor, to listen. Sometime of an evenin' arter the children was all asleep, and I sot in the chimbly corner a-darnin' socks or doin' up my weeks mendin' he'd take down some larned volum from the book case that he allers kept under lock and key, and if he come across anything suited to my needs or capacities, he kindly read it to me. T'enamost all the larnin' I ever got came in this way.

'I remember jest as if it was yesterday how kinder pleased-like he'd look over at me and the work I was a doin' while he read some lines from Sheridan Knowles, beginnin'—

'Women act their parts
When they do make their ordered households know 'em;

—or these words from another great poet,—Shakespear or Martin Farquhar Tupper, I disremember which—

What I do most admire in woman
Is her affections, but not her intillek.'

'One line of Vargil was a pertikler favorite of his'n. He said it in his sort of hectorin' way to me so often that, though I don't know no Latin (I should hope not), I larned this lingo by heart, and can repeat it now:

'Varium et mutible semper fœmina.'

(Husband said it meant, 'More fickle than the winged winds is woman.'

'At family prayers, which he kept up constant, and where he was the most eddifyin' of men, he used to ransack the Scriptures for passages improvin' to me and the gals—such as—

'Wives, be in subjection to your husbands.'

'Whose adornin' let it not be that outward adornin' of plaitin' the hair wearin' of gold or of puttin' on of apparel, but the ornerment of a meek and quiet sperit.'

'But the varses he set the most by was them of King Solomon describin' the vartuous woman. I know the hull on 'em by heart. Them books upon woman's spere by Dr. Todd and Dr. Fulton come out jest afore he died, and was the solas of his last hours. How many times when I was a-ministerin' around his dyin' pillow, he quoted to me them lovely words of Dr. Fulton: "Woman is God's first gift to man, and to be helper to man is nobler than to be queen of Heaven. For this God created you. For this he preserves you.'

One day the squire added, smilin', 'Jemima, you've ben to me a meek, lovin' industrus, devoted, obejent wife. I shall leave you the income of a third of my estate as long as you remain my widder. No son of my own can bear my name and honors, but the Pettibone name must be kept up, and t'other two-thirds,—the hull when you're done with it,—goes to Solon Pettibone, my second cousin's son, who is named arter me. When gals gets so uppish, and inderpendent in their idees as our gals, they'd better be left to scratch for themselves; leave 'em just one dollar apiece.

'(No, Susan Maria, I don't think that was too bad. Our gals went agin their par's teechin's, and it was his duty to punish 'em)

'For nigh upon thirty years I was blest with this high, improvin' companionship, and though a poor creetur at best, I tried in my humble way to be a 'helpmeet' for my husband. The squire was a master-hand for good vittles, and I made his liken's and disliken's in this line sich a study, that I entirely won his heart. (And, gals, the straightest road to any man's heart, leads right through his stummick.) From rise to set of sun, my work was never done. I looked well arter the ways of my household. I never ate the bread of idleness. My husband was known in the gates, when he sot among the elders of the land, and that was glory enough for me.

'You ask if the squire was kind to me. Matilda Jane? He made me keep my place; I don't suppose you'd call that kind, but I was content. If I'd gone on the way lots of people in these days is goin' on, he'd a-shut me up in a lunatic asylum, and served me right. He had a tremenjus will of his own, and I didn't dare to oppose it. I do believe that if he'd a smit me on the cheek I'd a turned him tother one also. In all things he was lord and master. I had promised to sarve, honor and obey him, and I kept my word. If I'd sot up my Ebenezer, and tried to have my say contrary wise to his'n I should a-roused a sperit no power on airth could quell. You have heerd of the iron hand in the glove of velvet. That was Squire Pettibone exactly. He jest quietly took it for granted that his word was law—like unto that of the Medes and the Persians, which changeth not.

'My gals—there was three on 'em—didn't grow up as they'd orter under sich pius teachin's. They used to say to me: 'Mar, you're a drudge and a slave. You don't dare say your soul's your own—you hain't got the sperit of the worm that turns when its trod upon. Par thinks all women his inferiors, and he's allus weepin' and bewailin' the heavy cross laid upon him in havin' his children all darters instid of sons.' (It was a heavy cross. I never could forgive myself for loadin' him with sich a burden.)

'Jenny, our eldest, though her par kept a dingin' in her ears John Milton's words, 'One tongue is enough for a woman"—Jenny, she went on and learned Latin, French and German in spite of him. He used to call her his polyglot darter. Susanna, she went through college, and then up and studied medicine. Ruth, arter gittin' a high-up edication, graderwated from the Boston School of Oratory, and now reads and elocutes in public.

Jenny, she's married, and keeps house in a new-fangled, labor-savin' sort of way, and seems to have her say about everything. Her husband thinks there's only one perfect woman on airth, and seems so dazed and dumbfounded like at his luck in marryin' that one, that he don't even have sperit enough to manage his own household.

'Susanna says she's wedded to her perfession, Ruth, who allers was a saucy minx, declares she is wedded to her art; that she don't want to be like her mar—a man's slave while he lives, and his relict arter he's dead. They're bright, good-lookin' gals if I do say it, and might have their pick of the best, if 'twan't for their obstreperous ways and highfalutin' notions.

'If their par could come back to this airth, and see how things are a-goin' on everywhere, even in the bosom of his own famerly, he'd find himself a-sayin' oftener than ever, 'Wa-al, this ere is a curus world!' and would be likely to make still more frekent use of that faverite phrase of his'n, when things in the world didn't go on to suit him, O, Tempora! O, Moses!"

DISTANCE.—Distance in truth produces in idea the same effect as real perspective. Objects are softened, rounded, and rendered doubly graceful; the harsher and more ordinary points of character are melted down, and those by which it is remembered are the more striking outlines that mark sublimity, grace or beauty. There are mists, too, in the mental as in the natural horizon, to conceal what is less pleasing in distant objects; and there are happy lights to stream in full glory upon those points which can profit by brilliant illumination. —Sir Walter Scott.

THE CANDLE AND THE LAMP.—If you carry a candle with you in the open air you have to cover the flame with your hand, and to keep your eye upon it; any wind may blow it out. But a lamp is safe from the wind; and if you carry it your eye is left free. Truth that you only acknowledge, and have not secured by the habit of your life, is like the flame of the candle. You wish the aid of its light to guide you when out in the dark places of the world; but in order to shield it, you have so to look to it that you cannot see by it. Any wind of opposing influence may extinguish it. Put your thought into a habit, and instead of a flaring candle you will have a steady lamp.

'Now, then, witness,' said the cross-examining counsel sternly, 'does the preceding witness enjoy your entire confidence?' 'Great Scott, no! Why, that is my wife.'

THE DREADFUL CYCLONE.—An appalling cyclone struck Eaton Rapids Township, Mich., at noon, Monday, doing a vast amount of damage and causing the death of two children, while rumors of other losses of life and property have been received. A large barn was blown to pieces, together with the grain separator, mower, hay tedder, grain drill and other implements. The force was so great that rafters were so firmly imbedded in the ground as to make it impossible for one man to remove them. A large new barn was destroyed, only enough remaining standing to save the life of Leroy Sherman, a young man who was in it at the time. He received a few bruises. The dwelling of Rice Perrine was unroofed, the granary swept away, and a hole as large as the common cellar dug through the thick shed near by. Eugene Henry's house was blown to atoms, his wife and six children being in it at the time. The woman was badly hurt, two of the children who were in bed were found over forty rods from the site of the house dead. Three others were badly injured, while the baby in the crib was unhurt, although the crib cannot be found. Apple trees were torn up by the roots and carried long distances. One entire orchard of over sixty trees was completely carried away, not a single tree remaining. Standing grain was torn up and swept from the earth, and a "Round Oak" stove carried across Grand River and smashed to pieces. Many wild rumors are afloat that a man was seen whirling through the air and borne out of sight. This is not confirmed, but it is stated a flock of sheep were blown away and cannot be found.
