I have three little angels waiting for me On the beautiful banks of the crystal sea, Not impatiently wait my darlings there, For smiles light up their brows so fair; And their little harps sings out so clear, So scothingly sweet to faith's listening car And they bask in the smiles of the Saviour's Who so early called my darlings above.

have three little angels waiting for me On the beautiful banks of the crystal sea, Forever free from sorrow and pain; Spotless and pure from all earthly stain; Never in erring paths to rove; Safe in the bosom of infinite love; Evermore, evermore walking in light, Those teautiful angels robed in white.

I have three little angels waiting for me On the beautiful banks of the crystal sea; When my weary heart is throbbing with pair And I fain would clasp my darling again, I look away from this earthly strand To the beautiful fields of the " better land "; And offer to God a thankful prayer.

I have three little angels to welcome me When I, too, shall stand by the crystal sea, When the great Refiner his image may trace In the heart he has changed by his saving And in robes of Christ's own righteousness

My soul shall seek the home of the blest, On the beautiful banks of the crystal sea, rangements. First, purchasing my ticket via Havana by the well known and popular steamship line known as the "Alexander," costing $101.00, American currency, for a first class passage to the city of Mexico. Secondly, I make a very minute consular invoice of all my effects, so as to save a fine at Vera Cruz which is imposed for the slightest error, or on the unlacky fellow who happens to have no invoice with the signature of the Mexican Consul; the fine is rarely ever less nan $25.00 and upwards, according to the greatness of the mistake; it is also imposed or the erasure of a letter or figure and another one put in its place. At 3 p. m., Thursday, March 8, 1883, I find myself aboard the pandsome and well disciplined S. S. City of Washington, commanded by the affable "Captain Reynolds," with Dr. Spore, a young man, who fills both the office of purser and physician, and who proved himself to be a very pleasant gentleman, doing everything be could for the welfare of the passengers.
