ONE striking feature which has marked the or progress of the mechanical arts during the last few years is the wenderful increase in the use of steel. We see heavy guos, armor plating for vessels, rails and a thousand and one other artic'es which a few years ago were con-structed entirely of iron now made of steel. In no line of goods has change been more marked than in the manufacture of Pleughs, and the LIGHF, GRACEFUL STEEL PLOW is fast taking the place of the old, cumbersome iron one.
