But, to be definite, I give the readings of the thermom eter for Fredericton, taken by a Government officer with great existness every three hours. And I may add that Fredericton is a fair test, being one of the coldest places in winter, and one of the warmest in summer in New Bruns wick. The lowest or January average for the last ten years has been nearly 11 degrees, and our highest or July average has been nearly 66 degrees for the same period. Of course, there have been days when the mercury ran far below zero, and other days when | Howie. it ran in mid summer to 80 degrees or more, but these are the averages for these ten years. The yearly average is about 40 degrees. During the warm weather the great thunder storms of the West seldom visit us, while tornadoes, eyclones, and floods which do so much damage, and lay such heavy tribute upon the villages and homestrais of the Western States of America, are absolutely unknown in all the Eastern Provinces of Canada.
