FARM AND LIVE STOCK NOTES.

It has been proven beyond all controversy that it takes more corn to fatten swine that are allowed to run at large than if the same ere closely confined.

One cart of manure so old and fine that it may be spread almost like sand will benefit the crops as much as two or possibly three carts of a coarse article. A Pennsylvania farmer builds his ice house in the ground, lining it with rails and reports great success in keeping ice. The cost of the affair is next to nothing. When there is occasion to dry up a cow that has just been fresh, as sometimes happens, milk her only when she is suffering
