Poetry.
Christmas Bells.
BY HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.
I heard the bells on Christmas Day
Their old familiar carols play,
And wild and sweet
The words repeat
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!
Till ringing, ringing on the air,
The world resounded from night to day,
A voice, a chime,
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!
But in despair I bowed my head:
"There is no peace on earth," I said; "For the great world is full of care,<
Of pain, of grief, of sorrow, and of tears."
Then peace on earth, good-will to men!
The world is full of care,
Of pain, of grief, of sorrow, and of tears.
The world is full of care,
Of pain, of grief, of sorrow, and of tears.
The world is full of care,
Of pain, of grief, of sorrow, and of tears.

Select Tale.
THE CHRISTMAS CARD.
"I will take this one," said Gertrude, when she had made her selection from a pile of Christmas cards on the counter. "Don't you think it is pretty, Aunt Julia?"
"Very pretty," was Mrs. Horton's answer, to which she added, "and very suggestive!"
"You do not think it too broadly suggestive?" Gertrude asked somewhat anxiously, for she meant to send the card to Warren Clyde.
"Not at all!" Mrs. Horton answered. "It will be just the thing. I declare, if this young lady doesn't look for all the world like the Lieutenant!"
"I look at the card. You can't see the girl's face very well, but—"
"There's where the suggestion lies," said Mrs. Horton with a significant smile. "That is a happy thought, my dear; I hope you won't let him slip through your fingers, for he is decidedly the best catch of the season!"
"I should say so!" Miss Gertrude answered warmly; "he is rich as he can be, and nice in every particular—a beau ideal, in fact!"
"You must manage it, my dear," said Mrs. Horton with emphasis. "I don't think we are far from a happy denouement," Miss Gertrude said, laughingly. "I have an eye to the main chance, Aunt Julia!"
"I am glad you are so sensible," said Mrs. Horton, "but you are a little too ready to give up. You must manage it, my dear," said Mrs. Horton with emphasis. "I don't think we are far from a happy denouement," Miss Gertrude said, laughingly. "I have an eye to the main chance, Aunt Julia!"
