Poetry.
Ensign Epps
By JOHN BYRLE O'BRIEN.
Ensign Epps, at the battle of Flanders,
Saw a seed of glory and duty
That flowers and flames in light and beauty.
He is a crimson lily with a heart of gold.
Today, when the wars of Ghent are old
And buried deep as their dead commanders.

Ensign Epps was the color-bearer—
No matter on which side Philip or Earl.
Their cause was the shell—his deed was the pearl.
Saw more than a lad, he had been a sharer
That day in the wildest work of the field.
He was wounded and spent, and the night was late.
His comrades were slain or a scattered host.
But stainless and scatheless out of the strife
He held his colors aloft rather than life.
He dashed from his eyes, and the silk he
knew
He held it aloft in the setting sun,
He saw the light as the fight was won.
And he smiled when they ordered him to
yield.
Heeded the victors. The thick heart-mint He dashed from his eyes, and the silk he
knew
He held it aloft in the setting sun,
He saw the light as the fight was won.
And he smiled when they ordered him to
yield.

Ensign Epps, with his broken blade,
Cut the silk from the gilded staff.
Which he held like a spear till the charge
was made.
He held the victors. The thick heart-mint
He dashed from his eyes, and the silk he
knew
He held it aloft in the setting sun,
He saw the light as the fight was won.
And he smiled when they ordered him to
yield.

Ensign Epps, with his broken blade,
Cut the silk from the gilded staff.
Which he held like a spear till the charge
was made.
He held the victors. The thick heart-mint
knew
He held it aloft in the setting sun,

Local & Foreign Items.
Divorcees are getting quite fashionable, in Scotland, says Truth. The number of decrees granted last year by the court of session was the highest on record, being an increase of fourteen over the number during 1884. The average number of decrees between 1864 and 1874 was thirty-five; but in the following five years the average rose to fifty-nine, while last year there was no fewer than eighty-five. In forty-seven cases the wife was the petitioner.

Why Is It?
Why do so many limp and hobble about on
sticks and crutches, suffering from rheumatism,
stiff joints and corals, lame back, sprains and
other aches, pains and lameness, when Hag-yard's Yellow Oil, an unailing relief, can be purchased at the trifling cost of twenty-five cents?

Why Is It?
Why do so many limp and hobble about on
sticks and crutches, suffering from rheumatism,
stiff joints and corals, lame back, sprains and
other aches, pains and lameness, when Hag-yard's Yellow Oil, an unailing relief, can be purchased at the trifling cost of twenty-five cents?
