Poetry.

Only A Song. was only a simple ballad, Sung to a careless throng : There were none that knew the singer, And few that heeded the song: Yet the singer's voice was tender

And sweet as with love untold Surely those hearts were hardened That it left so proud and cold. She sang of the wondrous glory That touches the woods in spring, Of the strange, soul-stirring voices When " the hills break forth and sing," Of the happy birds low wartling

The requiem of the day, And the quiet hush of the valleys In the dusk of the gloaming grey. And one in a distant corner-A wowan worn with strife-Heard in that song a message From the spring-time of her life. Fair forms rose up before her From the midet of vanished years;

She sat in a happy blindness, Her eyes were veiled in tears. Then when the song was ended, And hushed the last sweet tone, The listener rose up softly And went on her way alone, Once more to her life of labour She passed; but her heart was strong; And she prayed; "God bless the singer! And, oh, thank God for the song!
